FIGHT MANAGERS TO ENJOIN STATE OF CALIFORNIA

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—Jack Gleason, one of the promoters of the Jeffries-Johnson fight, to-day announced that he and his partner, Tex Rickard, would seek an injunction if the State authorities made a move to prevent holding the fight in San Francisco.

"We won't go away from here without a contest," he said, "even if we have plenty of other places available. Too much has been spent here, and the courts will not force us to lose the money, I'm sure."

FIGHT IS SURE ON JULY 4

The fight is going to be held on the Fourth of July—somewhere. Just where no man knows yet. Maybe the encounter will be held right here in San Francisco, despite Gillett. It may be held in Nevada. It may be held in Utah or even in Mexico.

Tex Rickard and Jack Gleason, his partner, to-day declared positively that Jeffries and Johnson are to fight. Where, Rickard would not try to say to-day. There are many details to be considered—the big thing is that there will be a fight.

"No Orders from Gillett."

Mayor McCarthy to-day reiterated: "I am Mayor of San Francisco. I'm taking no orders from Gillett or his Attorney-General. You can bet your last dollar that the big fight will take place here."

In this defiant attitude the Mayor is supported by many of the leading business men of the city and this part of the State.

The calling off of the plan to hold the big fight here means that San Francisco would lose a million dollars if not a great deal more. The business men when they heard what Mayor McCarthy had to say in Chicago took heart. They are going to hold a big mass meeting.

The business men and the hotel men got together early to-day and began making plans for the mammoth mass meeting where the people's voice is to be heard and public sentiment secured.

Strong opposition to the threat from the State authorities to prevent the mill has cropped up on all sides. The business men, led by the Mayor, don't intend to submit to interference. There is now a strong possibility of a clash between the State and city authorities.

Must Fight on July 4.

"If we can't hold the fight here," say Rickard and Gleason, "we can pull it off somewhere else."

One thing is sure to-day, if Jeffries is to be a party to the fight it must be held on July 4. Jeffries will go anywhere, but he refuses to consent to postpone the fight which would necessitate his starting training over again.

Johnson is eager for the fight. He wants to meet Jeffries anywhere, anyhow and at any time. His camp followers are just as anxious as the big black fellow is that the mill come off.

Johnson will consent to a postponement. To-day he suggested that the fight go over until Labor Day and be in some other State.

A legal test of Gillett's fiat forbidding prize fights in this State is to be made Saturday night when the Langford-Kaufman fight takes place here. The Governor ordered this mill to be stopped, too.

But Langford and Kaufman are going to go into the ring. They're going to strip for action and start in hammering each other. They are going to test the Governor's decree.

Fighting Penalty Severe.

The penalty for prize fighting can be made severe. But Langford and Kaufman are going to risk everything. They know that they will have the greatest of political influences to back them, and they are confident that they'll get off easy.

"Jeff and Johnson are going to fight," said Rickard to-day. "I say they'll fight, but I don't know just where. I saw Attorney-General Webb just a bit ago, and he told me he would let me know positively by Friday whether we could hold it in San Francisco or not.

"We will hold the fight. You fellows don't need to think of starting East. I'll hold this fight in California, Utah or Nevada on July 4 and both the big fellows are with me.

"By next Sunday if I don't start to build an arena in Nevada or Utah you can take it from me that we will have the fight right here in San Francisco. I've had offers from six cities for the mill. One came from old Mexico."

Not only is the sporting world shaken by the unexpected turn in affairs when Governor Gillett late yesterday afternoon directed Attorney-General Webb to prevent the fight, but the commercial world has suffered a terrible jolt. That's what makes the business men almost a unit with the sporting men to hold the fight here at all hazards.

Governor on the Grill.

While the opponents of the fight declare Governor Gillett's action to be a triumph for the conservative and the church element, the opposing faction denounced it to-day as hypocrisy and declare that the Governor should have given intimation before this of what he intended to do. This adverse impression, however, has been to a certain extent cleared up by the developments which show that pressure from Washington threatening the proposed Panama fair, for which New Orleans as well as San Francisco is struggling, led to the Governor's action yesterday.

The Panama fair proposition comes up to-day in Washington before the House Committee on Foreign Affairs in the form of two bills, one giving federal support for the fair to San Francisco, the other designating New Orleans.

Every man in any way connected with the big fight was on pins and needles to-day awaiting the outcome of the Panama fair plans.

There are two points in Governor Gillett's letter to Attorney-General Webb which to-day were seized upon by the sporting fraternity as significant. The entire responsibility of stopping the affair has been thrown on the shoulders of the Attorney-General by the Governor, and Webb must prove the intent to commit a felony. Failing in this, the Governor twice mentions a penalty to be imposed after the battle takes place.

"Jim Jeffries said to me when I told him of the Governor's action: 'I'm ready to fight on a barge, a desert or an ocean liner,'" said Rickard to-day. Johnson feels the same way. He went farther than Jeff: 'I'll fight on a telegraph wire if we have to,' was his way of putting it."

Louis Blot, who is managing the Kaufman-Langford go, said to-day: "This go will be pulled off Saturday. Just join the 'don't worry' club. District Attorney Fickert of San Francisco to-day, discussing the Governor's action, said: "It is surprising that Governor Gillett, nearing the end of a long administration in which hundreds of fights have been held in California, should suddenly decide them illegal."

MONEY TO WIN PANAMA FAIR

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The House Committee on Foreign Affairs to-day authorized Representative Fassett of New York to report to the House two bills for the Panama exposition concerning San Francisco and New Orleans.

The committee amended the bill requiring each city to subscribe $7,500,000 for a guarantee. The city that raises this sum first is to be recommended as the city for the exposition. If both cities raise the sum at the same time the question is then to be presented to the President for his decision. In this event it is not improbable that he would designate both cities to hold expositions.

FEARS CHILD'S DEATH, MOTHER ENDS LIFE

TAUNTON, June 16.—Under the mistaken belief that her three-year-old child would not recover from an illness, Mrs. Edward H. Quimby, forty-five, of No. 7 Agricultural road, drank carbolic acid at her home to-day and died within a few hours. It is believed that the mother became deranged by brooding over her child's sickness. Mrs. Quimby is survived by her husband and two children.

MORSE JEWELS UNDER HAMMER

NEW YORK, June 16.—Impoverished by attempts to bring about the release of her husband, who is serving a sentence of fifteen years in the federal prison at Atlanta for violating the United States banking laws, Mrs. Charles W. Morse to-day signed a contract with Augustus W. Clarke, an auctioneer, to sell at public auction the entire contents of the Morse mansion at No. 728 Fifth avenue.

The sale will take place on Thursday and Friday of next week. The contents of the mansion, gathered together from all parts of the world by Morse, are valued at close to $1,500,000 and consists of paintings, bronzes, tapestries, bric-a-brac, furniture, carpets, etc.

Even the jewels of Mrs. Morse, valued at many hundreds of thousands of dollars, consisting of rubies, diamonds, sapphires, emeralds, pearls, etc., will be included.

It has been rumored on many occasions that the entire Morse fortune, at one time estimated at $20,000,000, had been swept away since the former banker had gotten into difficulties with the Federal authorities.

SEVEN KILLED IN INDIA.

CALCUTTA, June 16.—Seven prisoners were killed at Lashkar to-day in an attempted jail break. The guards fired into the running prisoners.

MISS FOSTER, WHO GOES TO ARTIST FIANCE'S GRAVE

Snapshot by American photographer of the Boston girl as she arrived in New York.

BOSTON GIRL MOURNS OVER DEAD FIANCE

NEW YORK, June 16.—Miss Agnes Foster, fiancee of Leon Guipon, the young artist who killed himself in his studio, No. 360 West Twentieth street, came from Boston with her mother and viewed the body in an undertaking establishment at Fifty-first street and Eighth avenue.

Miss Foster was accompanied by Hiram C. Merrill, chum of the dead artist. She was overcome with grief. She afterward went with her mother to a hotel, where she denied herself to all callers.

The letter left by Guipon, in which he said that he had been haunted by the fear of sudden death from a weak heart and that he was unwilling to bring such untimely widowhood upon Miss Foster, was shown to the young woman.

"I do not want to poison her bright life, yet I cannot live without her," ran the lines. "I have fought manfully, but I am doomed. There is but one honorable path open to me and I shall manfully step into it, because my course is clear."

Miss Foster shook with emotion as she read the letter. The body of the dead artist will be cremated at Hoboken, according to his wishes, and his ashes will be scattered to the four winds, as he directed.

Miss Foster and Mr. Merrill will divide between them the paintings that Guipon left. Mr. Merrill said he never would sell any of them. While their market value might not be great, he said, they will be very precious to him and Miss Foster.

The two will also divide the furnishings of the artist's studio.

THREE GO FROM PARTY TO COURT

In the Newton District Court to-day Giovanno Sannario of No. 20 Hale street, Newton Upper Falls, was fined $5 for drunkenness, $20 for disturbing the peace and sentenced to two months in the House of Correction for assault upon a policeman. Sannario paid the fines, but appealed the imprisonment sentence. Bendito Generozio, thirty-six years old, of No. 20 Hale street, was fined $30 for disturbing the peace, and Antonio Generozizo of No. 14 Rogers street, Boston, was fined $20 for rescuing a prisoner from an officer. While an Italian party was being held at No. 20 Hale street Patrolman Shannassey and Fuller were called to quell a disturbance. It is alleged that Sannario hurled a large rock, hitting Shannessey in the head and felling him to the ground.

75 GRADUATES FROM MEDFORD HIGH SCHOOL

Seventy-five graduates of the Medford High School this afternoon received diplomas, Mayor Clifford M. Brewer awarding the sheepskins. Commencement exercises were held in the assembly hall of the school. Rev. A. A. Berle of Boston made an address and the school chorus and orchestra rendered selections. Thirty-four boys and forty-one girls compose the graduating class.

JUDGE URGES QUICK VERDICT ON "BIG BILL"

Defendant in Coleman "Bunco" Case Hears Charge With Composure—Crowd at Court Room Awaits Verdict.

The jury that decides the fate of William J. ("Big Bill") Keliher began deliberation in the Federal building at 11:30 to-day, following the address of Judge Hale, instructing the twelve men as to the law in the case.

"The issue," said Judge Hale, "is what Keliher knew. That's the one thing for you to keep in mind. An agreement should be reached without spending much time in deliberation."

KELIHER PACES CORRIDOR AS JURY ARGUES

At the conclusion of the Judge's charge, Keliher, who had listened to the address very carefully, walked out to the corridor and began smoking cigarettes. He walked back and forth, smoking one cigarette after another. There was no doubt by this time that Big Bill was getting pretty nervous.

In other parts of the building were Mrs. Walter G. Coleman, mother of George W. Coleman, the latter the main witness against Keliher. Miss Mamie Hightower, Coleman's fiancee, was with Mrs. Coleman. Wilson W. Lockhart and Frank van Biarcom, both witnesses at the trial, were in the corridors.

Much discussion was indulged in as to the probable verdict, the length of time the jury would be out and other phases of the remarkable case.

Keliher remained in the corridor of the court, smoking and chewing gum, until 1:30. Many of his friends stopped to speak to him. "iBg Bill" did not hesitate to express himself in connection with his case. He made a little speech, giving his views pretty freely.

Lawyers Pratt and Conkley had left the court house and had gone to their offices and to luncheon. Lawyer Callahan of that firm remained, and he walked up to the big fellow and asked him if he were not beginning to get hungry at 1:30. Big Bill said that he was, and the two went to luncheon together.

Two Officers Guard Jury.

The jury room is on the fourth floor. It overlooks Post Office square. At the door of the jury room were stationed two officers of the court, Deputy Marshals Young and Edwards. Up to 1.45 o'clock no word had come from the jury room, although it was expected that they would emerge before that time to go to luncheon.

Some of those who waited were of the belief that there would be a quick verdict and quoted the words of Judge Hale in which he said that it should not take them long to reach a verdict, as supporting their theory.

Others who had studied the jury were of a different opinion. There was no guess, however, as to how the jury probably stood.

BANDIT IN COURT, BAIL IS DENIED

GREENFIELD, June 16.—Silas N. Phelps of Monroe Bridge, who was captured at the point of a rifle after a four days' sensational man hunt, was held without bail till June 24 by Judge Henry J. Field in Greenfield District Court to-day on one charge of murder of Deputy Sheriff Emmett F. Haskins by shooting and another charge of attempted murder on Mill Foreman William Parsons by stabbing.

Phelps coolly answered "Not guilty" to each charge. Having recovered his nerve he stood up calmly and faced the Judge and the crowded courtroom without a quiver.

In a brief interview after the hearing Phelps said that the shooting was accidental. This indicates what the line of defence will be. Phelps has claimed, since his capture, that he had no real intention of shooting Deputy Haskins.

Phelps Is Worn Down.

Phelps slept like a log in Greenfield Jail over night. He was worn out, lame and too exhausted even to think. The relief to him from the strain of being hunted was obvious. No unusual guard was maintained at the jail during the night. There was talk that an effort would be made by the enraged countryside to drag Phelps from jail and lynch him. This failed to materialize.

When he was awakened to-day Phelps got up from his cell cot with difficulty. He was so stiff that his joints almost creaked.

"Oh, but I'm lame," he muttered.

After breakfast Phelps was handcuffde by one wrist to Deputy C. A. Davis of Turners Falls. Accompanied also by State Officer James McKay and by Deputy E. J. Pratt of Millers Falls, he was taken in Pratt's auto to the centre of the town. The swift mile ride seemed to brace the prisoner. He was taken first to a photographer's studio and "mugged." He made no objection.

Meanwhile a crowd was collecting about the district court building. When the automobile party arrived at 9 o'clock there was a forward rush to have a good look at Phelps. He was not prepossesing in appearance. His hand and face were clean but his clothes were soiled. Dust clung still to his heavy boots. Phelps surveyd the crowd dispassionately. Someone hooted, but no other demonstration was made. A lane was opened in the crowd and Phelps was hurried into the court and put into the railed enclosure for prisoners.

Handcuffs Removed.

Deputy Davis unlocked his own half of the manacles and let it dangle from Phelps's wrist. Thus the prisoner was unshackled. But the enclosure was surrounded by watchful officers.

The court house doors were locked leaving 200 on the outside.

Apparently no relative of Phelps was in the place. Arthur M. Haskins, son of the slain deputy, was the only member of the Haskins family present. Phelps did not look at young Haskins.

The shot-gun with which Phelps shot Haskins, "accidentally," as Phelps claims, was brought into court by Police Chief Manning of Greenfield, but, as the hearing was only an arraignment, the weapon was not introduced as evidence.

When the two charges were read Phelps limped to his feet and made his double plea of "Not guilty."

Bail in One Case.

State Officer McKay for the State asked for a continuance to June 24, saying that was the first occasion when District Attorney Richard Irwin of Northampton could attend to the case in person. Continuance was granted.

Bail on the attempted murder charge was fixed at $5,000. But it was a mere technicality, as Phelps was of course held without bail on the murder charge.

Phelps was unattended by counsel. In the regular course of events the State will assign counsel to him if he is unable to provide his own defence.

After the hearing Phelps was taken back to Greenfield jail. He was asked after the hearing:

"Why didn't you shoot at any of the men you saw in the woods?"

"I was sore and tired and afraid to move," he replied. "I thought it useless to shoot."

"Why didn't you kill yourself?"

"I had nothing to kill myself for," he said sharply. "I shot Haskins only by accident."

GUN TAKEN FROM MAN AT TAFT'S DOOR

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The White House police arrested James Stricklin, forty-five years old, of Cumberland, Md., to-day at the front door of the executive mansion. Stricklin insisted on seeing President Taft saying he had important news for him.

He was taken to the police station and when searched a large revolver was found on him. He also had several hundred dollars and a roll of manuscript in his pockets. This makes the second time within a year that Stricklin has been arrested at the White House. On his last visit he urged the police to admit him on account of the important dispatches he carried. When taken into custody a search revealed several revolvers and a quantity of ammunition.

The man was taken to the Washington Asylum Hospital to-day charged with insanity.

Stopped at President's Door.

Stricklin, who is of prepossessing appearance, gained entrance to the executive office without question and was at the threshold of President Taft's inner office when the doorkeeper, alarmed by the man's air of suppressed excitement held him up and questioned him. As Stricklin tried to force his way past him, the doorkeeper called Detective-Sergeant Dalrymple. The officer, after a question or two, was convinced the man was insane. He searched him and found a thirty-eight-calibre revolver, fully loaded, and $100, and then placed him under arrest.

At the station house Stricklin gave his age as forty-four, said he was a miner, and declared he came to Washington in answer to advertisements for him, that President Taft had inserted in various West Virginia papers. The police are also investigating a report that Stricklin tried to force his way into President Roosevelt's presence two years ago.

J. H. MELLEN DIED TODAY OF APOPLEXY

WORCESTER, June 16.—Representative James H. Mellen died at his home, No. 119 Providence street, to-day at 11:45 a. m. Since stricken with apoplexy at 6 o'clock Tuesday morning he was unconscious. He had been gradually growing weaker during the past twenty-four hours. Mrs. Mellen and the three sons, with one of the nurses and a number of the clergy, were at his bedside when the end came.

Mr. Mellen was sixty-five years old. Prominent in the Massachusetts House of Representatives for the past twenty years as the representative of Wards 4 and 5 of his city, Mr. Mellen became widely known throughout New England in political and labor circles.

Joined Knights of Labor.

As a young man he became interested in the then feeble efforts of the laboring classes of America to make known their strength through organization. He became identified with the Knights of Labor and had always been closely in touch with the affairs of the organization.

Mr. Mellen served as an alderman in this city for two terms and several years was a member of the State Democratic Committee. He was one of the organizers of the Worcester Branch of the Irish National Land League, was one of the chief officers in the Clan-na-Gael, a member of the Father Mathew Temperance Society and of the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

In the Legislature he served on many of the most important committees, among them the Committee on Railroads. His strong personality impressed itself upon the session of the Legislature just passed.

He had worked earnestly during the session for the appointment of the Homestead Commission, whose report, just filed, has been embodied in a bill favoring the lending of State aid for the building of suburban homes for the workers in large cities and towns.

Notice to Holders of Flag Coupons

The demand for flags by BOSTON AMERICAN readers has been so enormous and so far in excess of all expectations that the flag manufacturers are unable to supply us with flags as rapidly as required. We already have in our office all the orders for flags that we can safely guarantee to deliver by July Fourth. On that account we regret that we are compelled to inform our readers that only those orders now in our office can be delivered by the Fourth. All orders received between now and July Fourth will be delivered as soon after that date as possible.

HUNDREDS PERISH IN FLOODS

VIENNA, June 16.—Southeastern Europe is flood swept and reports received to-day indicate that the death list is between 800 to 1000.

Whole villages have been wiped out and fertile valleys are lakes. The property damage cannot be definitely estimated, but meagre advices already at hand show that it will surely be in excess of $2,500,000. The situation has not been equalled in many years.

Austria, the Balkans and Armenia have suffered heavily. Relief work is being pushed as well as possible, but with roads wiped out, railroads tied up and wire communication in many sections at a standstill, the difficulties of speedy relief appear insurmountable.

Rains are reported generally and the floods continue. With every dispatch the horror of the situation increases. In the entire region affected it is believed that more than 20,000 people are homeless.

King Peter Aids Sufferers.

In a proclamation to his people, King Peter of Servia, at the head of the relief work in the flooded Morava valley, reports the situation is serious. He asks that the nation pray for the afflicted. The end of the flood is not expected for some days as rains and snows give promise of further havoc. Other streams are also over their banks, flooding several villages. Hundreds of peasants have fled to safety in the hills.

Constantinople reports say that the Turkish government to-day began efforts at relief work in the flooded districts of European and Asiatic Turkey. It is believed that the roll of killed will be fully 500 in Armenia alone. The Western Euphrates and the Pasinaras rivers are flooded and several villages have been swept away. The situation is almost unprecedented.

Switzerland's Situation Serious.

Melting snows to-day increased the seriousness of the flood situation in Switzerland and Bavaria. Four towns on the borders of Lake Constance are under water, according to dispatches received here to-day and hundreds of their inhabitants are marooned.

The towns are Romanshorn, Rolltschach, Lindau and Friedrichshafen. Lake Constance is rising. The lowlands of western Switzerland are particularly affected.

Through the valley of the Orbe, running from Lake Neuchatel to Lake Geneva, towns are flooded, bridges swept away and crops destroyed according to dispatches from Neuchatel. Verdon is menaced and the towns of Vufflens, Bussigny and Daillens are under water wholly or partially, the inhabitants having been forced to flee.

HALL'S BANK TO CUT DEBT TO DEPOSITORS

Attorney Charles F. Choate, appearing for the institution, filed a petition with the Supreme Court asking authority for the Southbridge Savings Bank to scale down deposits to 85 per cent. to enable it to meet the loss caused by Treasurer Hall's defalcation. A law signed by Governor Draper yesterday is held to permit such a course by a bank intending to continue business. July 1 was set as the date for a hearing.

MELLEN TALKS ROAD TO BLOCK GRAND TRUNK

When a representative of the Southern New England Railroad appeared before the Railroad Commissioners to-day and asked for permission to build a connecting line from the Central Vermont at Palmer to the Rhode Island line at Woonsocket, which would extend the Grand Trunk from the provinces to Providence, the New Haven road sprung a surprise by declaring that it had in contemplation practically such a line and that if the charter were granted to the rival company the New Haven would not want to build it.

This brought on a rather warm discussion between Thomas W. Kenefick, for the Southern New England, and James F. Jackson, representing the New Haven company. The sincerity of the New Haven road was questioned by those who spoke for the Grand Trunk.

Mr. Jackson presented a petition of his clients that they be allowed to build from Southbridge to Palmer an extension of its present Southbridge branch. This route is practically the same as that of the Southern New England people.

Mr. Jackson said he believed that his clients were in a better position to build a better road in a shorter time than the other side, and that the people preferred that the New Haven should do it. He would admit that the previous hearing had shown that there was a public necessity for a road through these towns and that no evidence along this line need be introduced.

Mr. Kenefick expressed considerable surprise at the new move and said he would like to go on. His clients were prepared to build the road they ask for, whether decision is made on the other petition or not. He believed the other line, while not petitioning before, was practically "on the horizon."

HASKELL APPEALS TO SUPREME COURT

GUTHRIE, Ok., June 16.—Holding that the enabling act fixing the State capitol at Guthrie until 1913 was binding and that Governor Haskell was amenable to the State courts of Oklahoma, District Judge A. H. Huston to-day overruled Governor Haskell's demurrer to the injunctions granted by the State courts prohibiting removal of the State capitol effects until the election had been construed. The Governor immediately appealed to the Supreme Court. A decision from that tribunal is expected within ten days.

WATERTOWN PLANS A GALA "FOURTH"

According to the programme given out to-day by Chairman Charles M. Abbott of the Fourth of July Committee, Watertown will have a gala day on the Fourth this year. There will be a parade in the mornig of the school children of the town and all the uniformed ranks. A collation will be served at Saltonstall Park by the ladies at noon. Ball games and athletic events constitute the afternoon festivities, while a band concert at the Park will wind up the day.

SPAIN IS SHAKEN BY HEAVY QUAKE

MADRID, June 16.—Heavy earthquake shocks were felt to-day in Southeastern Spain, centring in the province of Almeria, and about the city of that name. Several buildings were damaged, but reports said that no persons were injured. A slight seismic wave was experienced in the Bay of Almeria, on which the city is situated.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The House today adopted the Stanle yresolution calling on the Attorney-General to report to Congress any information he may have showing whether the United States Steel corporation has violated the Sherman anti-trust law.

WOMEN MADE BALD

By Taking Too Many Trips in Automobiles

According to a dispatch in the New York Journal on March 14, 1910, a distinguished dermatologist says, among other things, that motoring is bad for women's hair, and that they must "either cut down the number of auto trips, or run the awful chances of becoming bald." The quantity of dust, dirt and disease germs that settle upon the head and hair while riding in automobiles is something dreadful, as every rider knows. There is really but one thing to do, and that is to wash the scalp and hair thoroughly. Don't use ordinary soaps or shampoos, because they often contain too much alkali, and that makes the hair fall out. Use Birt's Head Wash for cleansing the head, and use it just as often as you please, for it is the finest and best preparation known for this purpose. It is made of Refined Soap, Cochin Cocoanut Oil, White of Eggs, Glycerin and Salicylic Acid. It not only removes every vestige of dirt, dust and germs, but stimulates the scalp, removes dandruff, and leaves a glossy, silken sheen on the hair. You have no idea how refreshing and delightfully clean the scalp feels after Birt's Head Wash has been used. It is now put up in 25c tubes for the accommodation of automobilists and travellers, as well as in the regular 50c jars. At all druggists.

JUDGE HALE'S CHARGE TO JURY IN THE TRIAL OF 'BIG BILL' KELIHER

The case of William J. (Big Bill) Keliher, on trial in the Federal Court, charged with aiding and abetting George W. Coleman in looting the National City Bank of Cambridge, went to the jury at 11:25 o'clock to-day.

Judge Hale began his charge at 10 o'clock. He had finished at 11:25. Then Mr. French asked for an additional charge on some points. Lawyer Coakley and Mr. French conferred with Judge Hale about this. Coakley took twenty exceptions to the charge.

Keliher listened to the judge's address carefully. He manifested no feeling showing whether he thought favorably or unfavorably of the directions that the court gave to the jury.

Judge Hale pointed out that the jury was not to disregard the testimony of an accomplice, but that it should be examined carefully. He said that the argument against Coleman's testimony on this point fell flat, because Coleman had not been promised a reward.

"If Walsh knew that Coleman got the money from the bank," declared Judge Hale, "Keliher knew, and Walsh and Keliher talked that day, the day they met Coleman."

Judge Hale said that he was inclined to advise the jury that Walsh, Strausneider and Marshall should be left out of the case so far as their being involved in the present case was concerned.

Judge Hale in his charge said:

Judge Hale's Charge.

"Mr. Foreman and Gentlemen of the Jury:

"I assume that you will act free from prejudice or passion, and that justice, simple justice, will be the result of your deliberations. You must return your finding upon the evidence presented to you here.

"The law of the United States [illegible] a penalty for the misapplication of the funds of a national bank by an officer, agent or employe of the bank, and one who aids and abets in the misapplication of such funds, whether he be connected with the bank or a private citizen, is liable to the same penalty as the one who misapplies the funds.

"The government is proceeding against William J. Keliher upon the charge that he aided and abetted George W. Coleman in misapplying the funds of the National City Bank. The substance of the allegation in the indictment is that Coleman misapplied the funds of the bank in this way: That he was a depositor in the bank and at the same time the bookkeeper of the bank and a clerk, that he drew large checks without a deposit sufficient to pay them, that these checks on coming back to the bank were destroyed or hidden by Coleman, that they were paid by the bank through Coleman charging them off to inactive accounts, that Coleman failed to notify the bank officials of his overdrafts and that false entries on his books, covered up his misapplication of funds until the bank was completely wrecked.

Charge Against Keliher.

"The further allegation is made that William J. Keliher aided and abetted Coleman."

"I have recited in brief the substance of how the government charges Coleman got the money and how Keliher assisted him. The defendant comes into court with a presumption of innocence and that shall not be taken away from him unless you say he is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

"You are to draw no inference against Keliher because of his failure to testify.

"The first point in issue in this case is, did Coleman commit the offence in the indictment? Did he misapply the funds of the National City Bank as set forth in the indictment? If you find that Coleman did not misapply the funds, you will not have to pass to the second proposition as to whether Keliher aided and abetted.

"If Cashier Earle knew of the overdrafts, even though not notified by Coleman, the defendant cannot be convicted.

"If you find any testimony that Earle knew of the overdrafts, you are to pass on it.

"If you find that Earle did not know of the overdrafts then you are to pass upon the great question in this case—as to whether Keliher aided and abetted Coleman.

"Did Keliher Know?"

"The allegation in this indictment is that Keliher, well knowing the premises, aided and abetted Coleman; in other words, did Keliher know the fact that Coleman was obtaining money fraudulently from the bank? And if so knowing, he used the money so obtained or urged him to get it, then he is guilty of the offence charged.

"Did Keliher assist Coleman in getting the money fraudulently or did he counsel or help him?

"Did or did not Keliher know or believe that Coleman was getting the money fraudulently, and if so, did he encourage or incite him to get it or help him to spend it?

"The government claims that up to a certain time Coleman was a bright young man and behaved in a proper manner.

"You remember that the government offered evidence to show that he began to gamble and lost, and that he then fell in with a companion who led him to believe that matters could be fixed so that he would win and that at a certain time he was approached by a man named 'Jack,' with whom he had formerly had dealings, and that at his solicitation Coleman became acquainted with Keliher.

Difference in Ages.

"The government also has offered testimony to show that Keliher was thirty-eight years old, and that Coleman was much younger, twenty-four.

"The government has also offered evidence to show that this 'Jack' and Keliher then induced Coleman to take up gambling again, and that these experienced men came to Coleman, with a view to soliciting him to gamble."

"There is also evidence tending to show that they did this with a knowledge that the money had been fraudulently taken from the bank before by Coleman and that they intended to have him take more, and that the introduction of Keliher to Coleman by Jack was for that purpose.

"The government has urged that the testimony of all these transactions tends to show that Keliher knew and believed the money came from the bank.

"It is for you to say whether Keliher did know.

"I give you the instruction that the evidence of an accomplice must be corroborated in material matters.

"I advise you not to convict Keliher on uncorroborated testimony of Coleman.

"On the question of corroboration in this case the government has urged on you different things which it claims are corroboration. You are to give these such weight as you see fit.

Testimony of an Accomplice.

"You are not to disregard the testimony of an accomplice. You should have caution about such testimony and examine it carefully. The reason for the rule regarding the testimony of accomplices is that accomplices act generally from selfish motives due in most cases to the promises of reward held out. In this case, however, there is affirmative testimony, because Coleman has not only not been promised any reward, but stands convicted of his crime and is on his way to the penitentiary.

"The argument, accordingly, that in this case the testimony of an accomplice should be disregarded falls flat. The defence says that Coleman has hopes for a pardon, but no evidence has been presented to that effect. The fact remains, and an important fact bearing on this contention, that Coleman is now at this moment on his way to the penitentiary and to serve there a long term of years.

Coleman's Falsehoods.

Now we come to the government's contention of the knowledge that the funds spent or dissipated or disposed of, which ever way you want to put it, were the funds of the National City Bank and that Keliher knew that they were the funds of this bank. The government urges that Coleman has told the truth. That while he was making his statement here he had no reason for telling a falsehood to the jury and that he had every reason to tell the truth. The government says that the reasons for Coleman's falsehoods was to persuade or compel Keliher to restore some, at least, of the money for the aid of the depositors in the bank. The government urges that this evidence should be credited. It is for you to say whether credit should be given to Coleman's testimony. It is for you to say what the effect of this testimony shall be in your deliberations, despite what the defence has claimed as regards any falsehoods told by Coleman.

"It's for you to determine what the intention was in the mind of Keliher when he and Jack met Coleman that day near Boston Common and succeeded in having Coleman begin again his manipulation of the books of the bank, his cashing again of the checks through the brokerage house, his renewed trips to New York, his reentry into the faro game and his beginning anew of robbing the bank.

Coleman's Buffalo Trip.

"Walsh and Keliher may have sought the complicity of Coleman. They may have known that Coleman was getting the money from the bank. If Walsh knew, Keliher knew, and Walsh and Keliher talked that day, the day they met Coleman; if Keliher knew that Walsh said to Coleman, 'Get some money, George, and come over to New York,' it is for you to say whether that does not show that Keliher was acting in complicity with Walsh and with Coleman and knew that the money was coming from the bank.

"There are those telephone calls to Buffalo, when Coleman hurried home and with Keliher and secured $4,000 from the bank. It is for you to say with what knowledge was Keliher possessed of the source of Coleman's money supply, whether from the bank or from some place else.

"There has been a mass of testimony presented in relation to the parties concerned in the transactions involved. The government says that Keliher is a member of a gang of thieves, gamblers and faro players, a gang that is a menace to the community, that the dens at No. 30 Huntington avenue, No. 6 Beacon street and No. 110 State street, were haunts of thieves and swindlers. The defence claims that whatever parts others besides Keliher played in any of the matters revolving about this case, should have no place in your decision.

Question of Handwriting.

"Walsh may be involved. Strausneider may be involved and Marshall may be involved, others may be; but I am inclined to advise that this contention of the defence is just. They have no part in the particular charge against Keliher, that of aiding and abetting the misapplication of funds by Coleman. They are entirely apart from the solemn and serious question of Keliher's guilt or innocence.

"Now as to the testimony regarding the handwriting. It is very important in this case, because it shows that Keliher and Marshall were concealing not only themselves, but concealing matters of direct importance. For this reason the handwriting testimony is very important, and you are to give it weight to which, in your judgment, you believe it is entitled.

"You may or you may not find that all this testimony concerning a band of swindlers and sharpers and gamblers will aid you in coming to a decision. The one question in the case is, is Keliher guilty? Did he know the source of the supply of money given him by Coleman?

"I don't tell you to forget all about Walsh, and Strausneider and Marshall. I don't ask you to forget all about the different offices with that paraphernalia, but keep your minds on the main proposition.

"What Did Keliher Know?"

"It makes no difference what Coleman said at one time or another time, or what Coleman thought. The issue is, what did Keliher know? Not what Coleman knew. Not what Coleman thought he knew, but what did Keliher know? You may disregard Coleman's testimony before the Suffolk County Grand Jury, if you believe you should. You have heard his entire testimony here, and it is for you to consider his testimony as you believe it should be considered. The various corroborative items should be taken at their proper value.

"The government notes the disappearance of the faro men from their haunts and the closing of their establishments at just about the time of the exposure of Coleman's wrong. This should have great influence in showing the connection existing between the faro men and the loss of the bank's money.

"It is for you to say what effect you will give to the whole testimony. For you to say just how valuable is Coleman's testimony, and for you also to say whether Mrs. Arnold's testimony does not in effect corroborate and in one very important particular the testimony of Coleman.

"Big Bill" Puffs Cigarette.

"This case has been thoroughly and very ably tried on both sides. Almost one hundred and twenty witnesses have been heard and I have allowed in every bit of evidence that I believe competent. The issue has been carefully presented by able and brilliant counsel for both sides, and so carefully that an agreement should be reached without spending much time in deliberation."

Judge Hale concluded at 11:25 o'clock. Attorney Coakley took twenty exceptions to the judge's charge. At the end of the conference Judge Hale said to the jury, supplementing his charge:

"It is for you to say whether or not the men Keliher said he would see to get money for Coleman were members of the gang and if Keliher were connected with them."

The case was given to the jury at exactly 11:30 o'clock.

As soon as the jury were out, "Big Bill" went into the corridor and nervously smoked a cigarette. His face was flushed and he seemed more affected than at any time during the trial.

Kaiser Is Now Laid Up With Lame Knee.

BERLIN—The Kaiser is laid up again. Scarcely before the effects of the boil on his wrist had passed away, he has been afflicted with a new trouble, which to-day compelled the cancellation of his proposed visit to Hanover this week. An effusion of matter from his right knee, declared by the doctors to be the result of friction in the saddle, has rendered the Kaiser lame. While there is no fever, according to a bulletin given out to-day, the sore causes considerable pain.

Perils of Paris Streets.

PARIS—William Peno's efforts to organize Parisian traffic have been unavailing, and a local commission has taken up the task of bringing order out of chaos. The commission's report contains various suggestions which, if carried out, would doubtless prove useful, but the committee itself makes them half-heartedly. Meanwhile, the dangers of the Paris streets are growing daily, and that persons are not killed hourly is a perpetual miracle.

Russia's Population 160,000,000.

ST. PETERSBURG—The population of the Russian Empire, including Finland, according to data collected by the Statistical Department for 1909, has reached 160,095,200. Of the entire population 86.5 per cent. is engaged in agricultural pursuits, the urban population numbering only 13.5 per cent. Figures on the proportion of the sexes show an excess of females only in European Russia and Finland, males predominating in Poland, the Caucasus and Siberia.

To Erect Statue of Luther.

BERLIN—In spite of the explanation from the Vatican declaring that no offence was intended to non-Catholics, the wave of protest at the recent Borromeo encyclical continues to grow, and meetings for denunciation have been planned at a hundred towns. Even in the principal cities of Catholic Bavaria, the protest is general, and plans are being made for the erection of a statue to Martin Luther at Stuttgart.

Former Deputy Consul Accused.

LONDON — Alfred Friberg, formerly United States Deputy Consul-General at Stockholm, was arrested in London this afternoon on charges of fraud and embezzlement. Friberg, who was taken into custody at a fashionable hotel, is alleged to have taken a large amount from Stockholm. He was later arraigned in the Bow Street Court. Arrangements for his extradition were immediately begun.

Czar and Family on Cruise.

ST. PETERSBURG—Emperor Nicholas, Empress Alexandra and others of the royal family have begun a cruise along the Baltic Coast. The party will be present at Riga during the celebration of the bicentennial anniversary of the annexation of the Baltic provinces by Russia.

Lord Wolverhampton Resigns.

LONDON—Viscount Wolverhampton has sent to Premier Asquith his resignation as Lord President of the Council, pleading ill-health. He was eighty years old last month and has been Lord President of the Council since 1908. He has steadily opposed the Lloyd-George budget.

Herman Vezin's Body Cremated

LONDON—The body of Herman Vezin, the actor and teacher of elocution who died three days ago, was cremated at Golder's Green in accordance with the wishes of the deceased. The ashes were scattered over the flower beds in the garden of the crematory.

Pellagra Caused by a Parasite.

LONDON—Dr. Louis Sambon, who has been conducting researches in Italy on behalf of the English pellagra investigation, says he has established that pellagra is caused by a parasite carried by a small gnat, the simulum voraus, which breeds in running streams.

REPORT HITS BIG INSURANCE COMMISSIONS

Excessive commissions paid to fire insurance agents and the difficulty of regulating the same, form an important portion of the fifty-fifth annual report of State Insurance Commissioner Frank H. Hardison, issued to-day.

The limiting of expenses of fire insurance companies was suggested last year by the Commissioner. The trouble is so aggravated that the Commissioner goes into it in detail this year. His report reads in part:

"In the text of his report last year the Insurance Commissioner suggested that it might be necessary to limit by statute the expense of fire insurance companies. The reason for the suggestion was the well-known fact in insurance circles that a larger proportion of the premiums are being used for commissions to agents by some companies than seems fair or necessary. That 40 cents of $1 of a premium should go to an agent for his commission in placing a policy seems a rather large amount when compared with the 60 cents which goes to the company for paying losses and all the other expenses to which the company is subject, such as maintenance of office, salaries, clerk hire, taxes, fees, costs of adjustment of losses, and the like.

Tendency to High Commission.

"To be sure, not all premiums are subject to so large a commission as 40 per cent. In fact, at present it is true of only a small proportion. But the tendency is in that direction for a certain class of risks known as "preferred," meaning by that term a class on which the loss ratio, or the percentage of loss to premiums, is small, consequently on these risks there is a good profit.

"This is the class of business all companies desire to procure, and in order to obtain it not a few of them will offer the agent who controls such risks a higher commission than he is at present receiving. As a result, commissions have advanced on this class of business to 40 per cent. in some cases at the present time, with a tendency still upwards.

"There is also another influence at work for increasing commissions and that is the effort of new companies and companies of indifferent financial standing to obtain business.

Forced Up by Competition.

"For example, a company with a capital of only $200,000 and a small surplus seeks for agents in the various communities. Agents of standing who command the best patronage of a place have a long list of old companies with high financial standing and naturally would give all their business to such companies,—at any rate the cream of it,—and usually they do not care to take on new companies except to make them the dumping ground for such poor risks as their old and conservative companies object to taking. To get into such agencies and obtain any part of the good business they control, it is necessary for weak and fledgling companies to offer a larger remuneration to the agents than they are getting from old and tried companies, and thus competition forces the commission up and is continually doing it.

"It is true that not all agents will take on new companies, even though these seductive offers are made to them. But on the other hand there are those who will listen to the ready-dollar argument; and in addition use the offered increase in commissions as a lever to pry up the commissions paid by their other companies.

Guard Against Monopoly.

"It is strongly argued, and seems plausible, that any legislation which fixes the expense which may be incurred on account of the fire insurance business will have the effect to give a monopoly of it to a few great companies, for, to accomplish any change in rates which would benefit the public, the cut in expenses must be such as to render it certain that the small and weak company would get little business, as it could not afford a larger inducement to the agents than what the larger companies are willing to pay.

"The larger companies would consequently get the best of the business, and would otherwise conduct their business at a less proportionate expense, as the ratio of fixed charges need be much less for a large company than for a small one.

"The problem appears, therefore, to be one of great perplexity, and the commissioners as a whole have an important task set before them, both in the matter of making investigations to discover the real facts in the case, and in coming to a conclusion as to whether legislation will be of any advantage to the public, and if so, what that legislation ought to be."

TAXPAYERS FIGHT B. A. A. BOATHOUSE

Arthur P. Tarbell and other taxpayers and property owners on Brimmer street began to-day in the Supreme Court a fight to prevent the Boston Athletic Association from erecting a boathouse on the location granted to it in April by the Charles River Basin and the Metropolitan Park Commissions. The location is next to the Union Boat Club on the Charles River Basin Parkway, which the petitioners say it is to be built at taxpayers' expense, and is for the use of the general public. It is claimed the commissions have no legal right to grant a private location.

CHURCH UNITY WINS PRAISE OF ROOSEVELT

EDINBURG, June 16.—At the world missionary conference here to-day, a letter from Theodore Roosevelt was read, in which he expresses his regret at being unable to attend. The letter was written in London a month ago and was sent to one of the American delegates, Silas McBee.

Declaring that he was "imperatively called to America" the former President says that had he attended the conference it would have been as a delegate from the Dutch Reformed Church of America.

"Nothing like your proposed conference," he writes, "has ever hitherto taken place. From many nations and from many churches your delegates gather on this great occasion to initiate a movement which I not only hope but believe will be fraught with far-reaching good. For the first time in four centuries Christians of every name come together without renouncing their several convictions, or sacrificing their several principles, to confer as to what common action may be taken in order to make their common Christianity not only known to, but a vital force among, the two-thirds of the human race to whom as yet it is hardly even a name.

"Your conference represents the practical effort to apply the teachings of the gospel to what the Epistle of Jude calls the 'common salvation.'

"An infinite amount of work remains to be done before we can regard ourselves as being within even measurable distance of the desired goal; an infinite amount at home in the dark places which too often closely surround the brightest centres of light and an infinite amount in those dark places of the earth where blackness is as yet unrelieved by any light.

"In missionary work, above all other kinds of Christian work, it is imperative to remember that a divided Christendom can only imperfectly bear witness to the essential unity of Christianity."

WELLESLEY SCHOOL GRADUATES EIGHTY

Graduation exercises of the classes of the Wellesley Grammar School were held this afternoon in the High School Assembly Hall. Diplomas were presented one of the largest classes which has left the school in years, there being over eighty graduates. Many musical numbers and the presenting of "The Lady of the Lake" by members of the graduating class were features of the program. Mrs. M. J. Overholser, secretary of the school committee, presented the diplomas.

CZAR RELENTS, GIVING JEWS TIME TO MOVE

KIEV, June 16.—The Kiev authorities have been ordered by the central government to proceed slowly in the matter of the expulsion of Jews. They are instructed to grant those persons amenable to the degree of expulsion a longer or shorter delay for the settlement of their affairs as may be needed in each particular case and, further, that they shall make no attempt to clear the city of all such persons within any fixed date.

The instructions of the Russian government practically mean that the Kiev authorities shall not resort to the dreaded deportation by "Etappe" and it is now expected, at least in Jewish circles, that the remainder of the year will be consumed before the last of the 1,602 families, who received official notification of their expulsion, leave Kiev.

The widow of the well-known refugee Gerstein, who fled from Odessa to Kiev during the pogrom in 1905, and who died here last January, was expelled by "Etappe" from Kiev. She returned to claim her children and succeeded in tracing them first to a foundling asylum, where they had been baptised in the Orthodox faith, and then to a village, where they had been sent for adoption.

TWO FAMILIES ESCAPE BY ROOF AMID SMOKE

Two families were partly overcome by smoke at a fire which broke out in the four-story brick dwelling house at No. 35 Lowell street, West End, at 9:15 a. m., to-day and barely escaped suffocation by getting on to the roof and crawling on a fire escape to a window in an adjoining house. Their names are Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Leskovitch and Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Cohen.

On the first floor is the dry goods store of Hyman Smith. Benjamin Monoson, who works next door, saw smoke pouring out of the rear window of the store, and pulled an alarm. When the firemen arrived the flames had spread to the front of the store and were spreading to the hallway on the second floor.

The Leskovitch's live on the third floor and are late sleepers. They were awakened by the smoke and made their way to the smoke-filled hallway. Groping their way to the second floor they found escape that way cut off.

Running up stairs to the third floor they knocked on the doors of the rooms occupied by the Cohens and aroused them from their slumber.

In the entryway the Leskovitchs succeeded in opening a window which led to the roof and connected with a fire escape. Through this aperture they made their escape, followed a minute later by Mr. and Mrs. Cohen. The damage to the store and building was $500.

FIVE ARRESTED IN MILK CASES FINED

For having watered milk in his store Peter J. Burke of No. 135 Cambridge street, Charlestown, was fined $50 in the Charlestown Court to-day. Walter L. Rice and Frank Bullens, employed by the Gaustein Milk Company to sell milk to storekeepers and others from teams, were arraigned on the charge of having milk in their possession not of standard quality. They were fined $20 each. Joseph Buckley of No. 37 Henderson street, Arlington, and Martin O'Brien of No. 2 Ferris street, Everett, were each fined $20 for the same offence. The complainant in each case was James O. Jordan of the State Board of Health.

DICKINSON GOING TO PHILIPPINES

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Secretary of War Dickinson announced to-day that he is to sail from San Francisco on June 28 for the Philippines via Honolulu and Japan. On July 4 the secretary will inspect Pearl Harbor and the military post at Honolulu. Five weeks will be spent in the Philippines. He will be accompanied by his wife, General Clarence R. Edwards and Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson. The party is to leave Manila September 6, returning by way of the Trans-Siberian Railroad.

NEW CLAIMANTS TO WYMAN MILLIONS

SALEM, June 16.—In addition to the contest of Mrs. Mary Nourse Cutler of Andover over the will of the late Isaac C. Wyman of this city, who died recently, leaving an estate of several millions to Princeton University, an appearance was entered in the Probate Court here from the law office of Wadleigh and Shaw of Lynn, on behalf of John Mudge of Salisbury, Mass., and Frank Mudge of Peabody, who claim to be cousins of the deceased, and also on behalf of the heirs of Parker and Tyler Mudge of Lynn.

JOHN A. STEVENS, HISTORIAN, DEAD

NEWPORT, R. I., June 16.—John Austin Stevens, author and historian, died at his home here early to-day. He was eighty-three years old and death was due to old age. He was graduated from Harvard in 1846, and nine years later married Margaret A. Morris. He became a merchant in New York and in 1862 was made secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. He founded the Magazine of American History.

CHARLTON WAS SEEN AFTER BODY OF WIFE WAS FOUND IN LAKE

MRS. PORTER CHARLTON

New picture of the victim of the Lake Como tragedy.

By VANCE THOMPSON.

COMO, Italy, June 16.—The State Department at Washington still holds the theory that Porter Charlton is guiltless of the murder of his wife and has exercised such pressure that the Italian Government has finally consented to a search of the lake by divers. Minister of the Interior Luzzatti has given the necessary consent and two divers are on their way from Genoa. They begin work this morning. The Italian authorities do not believe the results will pay for the work, but they allow it to be done out of courtesy to the United States.

The theory that Charlton is dead has been practically abandoned by the police here. As to his present whereabouts, however, there are two opinions. One is that the first news of him will come from America. He is believed to have sailed for New York either on the Italian Steam Navigation Company's steamer Verona on June 8, or on the Italian-Lloyd steamer Virginia on June 9, the day his wife's body was found.

Russian Had Brass Knuckles.

Both steamers have wireless outfits and messages have been sent to the captains instructing them not to permit any passenger who answers the description of Charlton to land without thorough examination. The opinion is based on statements that Charlton was seen in Como several hours after the body was dragged from the lake. He is said to have been seen about the streets early in the evening wearing a suit of Scotch tweeds and carrying a leather valise and a rain coat.

This man went to the railroad station at 11 o'clock and left his baggage. He returned at midnight and took the express for Switzerland, travelling on a tourist ticket that was bought in Venice.

Whatever Charlton's connection with the crime may have been the police still believe that the Russian, Ispolatoff, was an accomplice. To-day he formally denied all knowledge of the crime. Sunday night he was at Rongiano and the next day he went to Chiasso he said. One important fact that has been developed is that the Russian owned a pair of brass knuckles, found in his room. They are believed to have been stolen by the murderer and used to commit the crime, as Mrs. Charlton's nose was broken and her skull crushed.

I accompanied the commissary of police, who went to cross-examine all witnesses at Moltrasio. We visited the Hotel Milano, where the Charltons breakfasted Sunday. The landlord showed the commissary the list of drinks furnished the couple. In fourteen days they drank thirty bottles of wine, three bottles of rum and seven bottles of brandy, in addition to what they drank at meals. Mr. Charlton, the landlord said, was drinking rum on Sunday and seemed very nervous.

Through the courtesy of Count Guglia, the King's procurator, I secured permission to go over the house, where the crime was committed, with a detective. We made a thorough examination.

Rooms Blood-Splashed.

The first room is a sort of parlor. It has a brick floor and is furnished with several tables and chairs. In the fireplace was a mass of burned papers and letters. In a room used as a dining room, adjoining the kitchen, there were blood splashes on the floor leading to the stone steps at the foot of which is the street door.

There were scores of books scattered about the lower floor of the house, mostly Ibsen, Mariel, Provost, de Maupassant and Oscar Wilde. There was a volume of poems presented to Charlton by Thomas R. Shepard, and a hymnal, on the flyleaf of which aws written, "To Porter Charlton, from his mother on his tenth birthday, March 24, 1899."

There was a broken lamp in the kitchen and a number of soiled dishes on the shelves in the cupboard.

A stone staircase leads to the second floor, where there are two bedrooms. The walls of these rooms are splashed with blood and the mattresses and the pillows on both beds are stained.

In one of these rooms beyond doubt Mrs. Charlton was killed. Her body was carried down to the terrace, where it was placed in the trunk.

At Hartford as "Mrs. Bette."

In one of the bedroom closets was another trunk, which we opened. It was full of her clothes. Dresses, shoes, underwear and several silk petticoats. Among these I found an empty pocketbook. None of her jewelry has been found except the wedding ring, which was upon her hand. The closet in the second bedroom also contained her clothes. There were also manuscripts of short stories and poems she had written and a number of love letters, signed "Fred."

We found a document signed by W. H. Hotchkiss appointing her an agent of the Equitable Life Assurance society on May 20 last year, and a bill from the Hotel Lagarde of Hartford, Ct., showing that she stayed there in 1908 under the name of Mrs. W. C. Betts. It developed to-day that the mysterious woman in black, who has figured in the case was a German governess, seeking a position. The police suspect that Mrs. Charlton had a son by her first husband as allusion to our little Rudolph is found in one of her letters addressed to him.

COL. GASTON RETURNS ON THE SAXONIA

With passengers numbering 1,445, the Cunard liner Saxonia reached her pier at East Boston to-day. Among the saloon passengers were Francis Lee Higginson, who for five years past has been the head of the London branch of Lee, Higginson & Co. Mrs. Higginson accompanied him, and both expressed their intention to remain here permanently.

"We enjoyed life in London," said Mr. Higginson, "but there is no place in the world like Boston to us."

William A. Gaston, head of the National Shawmut Bank, and his daughter Ruth also came down the gangplank.

"I was only abroad ten days," said the former Democratic candidate for Governor. "My daughter has been in Germany for four months. England is still in mourning over the death of Edward VII. In spite of the Guildhall speech, I saw evidence that Roosevelt still retains great popularity among the people of England."

Mr. and Mrs. William Hooper were also among the returning tourists. They have been abroad eighteen months, and at the time of the great Messina earthquake Mr. Hooper was selected with four others by Ambassador Griscom to distribute the funds that had been sent from America to the refugees.

Among others on board were Mayor and Mrs. James Logan of Worcester and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rantoul of Salem.

Captain E. H. Pentecost, commander of the Saxonia, has but one more round trip to make before severing his connection with the Cunard line. He has been twenty-nine years at sea, is but forty-one years old, and since 1896 has been in the Cunard service. He plans to bring Mrs. Pentecost to this country and settle here.

The big steamer brought seventy-three passengers in the saloon, 356 in the second cabin and 1,016 in the steerage.

MEXICAN SOCIALIST AT BOSTON PICNIC

Gutierrezde Lara, the man who piloted John Kenneth Turner through Mexico when gathering material for his book, "Famous Mexico," is billed by the Boston Socialist Club as the principal speaker at its eighth annual picnic to be held at Oakland Grove, East Dedham, to-morrow. Since taking his trip with Turner and assisting to gather material for "Barbarous Mexico," De Lara has been actively engaged in propagating the doctrines of socialism throughout this country. He is looked upon as an international character by men prominent in that movement.

QUAKE SHOCKS FELT AT WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, June 16. — Several heavy earthquake shocks, followed by a series of unusual tremors, were recorded on the seismograph at the Georgian University here early to-day. The distance of the shocks is estimated at from 3,000 to 4,000 or more miles. Preliminary tremors began at 1:48 o'clock, followed by two heavy shocks lasting from 1:59 to 2:02, and 2:03 to 2:05. Tremors continued until 2:08. Then there was another shock lasting until 2:32 o'clock. Slight tremors continued until 2:37. Then a series of slighter shocks lasting until 2:46 o'clock and slight shock from 2:51 to 2:52. Tremors continued until 4:11. The total time of the tremors was 2 hours and 23 minutes.

RECORD LAW CLASS AT THE Y. M. C. A.

At the close of the present term of the Law School of the Young Men's Christian Association one of the largest classes in the history of the institution is to be sent out. The commencement exercises were held last night. The coming graduation is to make an enviable record for the largest class in their history containing the large class in their history containing a number of representative men. F. P. Spear, the dean of the institution, was present at the exercises, and expressed his gratitude for the coming graduates, taking an active interest in their welfare.

$1,000,000 FEE TO SUGAR PROSECUTOR

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The United States will pay to Richard Parr something approaching $1,000,000 for his efforts in exposing the sugar frauds in the New York customs house.

TWO BANQUETS TO OPEN BUNKER HILL DAY FETE

To-morrow is Charlestown's great annual occasion—Bunker Hill Day. It is the 235th anniversary of that historic battle. Great was the battle. Great is the celebration thereof.

The anniversary will really set in to-night, so far as celebration goes. There will be two "night before" banquets. The rule used to be one banquet. The two spreads to-night will be that of the Catholic Literary Union, in the Waverley building, and the other that of the Hayes Square Outing Club, in the Ward Three wardroom at Lexington and Bunker Hill streets. There will be no bonfire in Charlestown.

To-morrow morning there will be a firemen's parade and muster. "Red shirts" will be there from all over New England.

To-morrow afternoon there will be a second parade, the military and civic demonstration.

Fireworks To-morrow Night.

To-morrow night there will be fireworks and the "open door," such hospitality as Charlestown citizens dearly love to provide.

Charlestown will not have the celebration fun all to itself, however, on this year. For the Dorchester Day celebration, postponed on account of rain, will be held to-morrow in Dorchester district, with the exercises, sports, music and fireworks as previously announced.

Medford contributes to the anniversary excitement to-night by setting off a bonfire ninety feet high, built of railroad ties. Oratory in bulk—and then some more oratory—will be dispensed to the patriotic celebrators by the best speakers in Massachusetts, to the members and invited guests attending the banquet on the "night before."

Great List of Speakers.

The list of speakers is comprised of following: Governor Draper, Mayor Fitzgerald, Congressman Keliher, District-Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier, Professor James C. Monaghan, Speaker Walker of the House of Representatives, the Rev. Philo W. Sprague, Michael L. Fahey and others will speak at the Union banquet.

The speakers for the Hayes Square Club time are Congressman Eugene N. Foss, Hon. William F. Murray of the Governor's Council, Hon. Thomas H. Dowd, Hon. James A. Gallivan, Mayor Fitzgerald, Assistant District Attorney Thomas D. Lavelle, Chairman Salem D. Charles and Secretary John J. O'Callaghan of the Board of Street Commissioners, Councilor Thomas J. Kenney, Hon. J. J. McNamara, Hon. W. T. A. Fitzgerald, Hon. Daniel V. McIsaac, Hon. W. S. McNary, David F. Long, J. A. Kiggen, James H. White, Senator F. A. McLeod, John F. McDonald, Representative T. Sorenson, Representative Fred Colpoys, William A. McDevitt, Dr. Percy A. Mallor.

The firemen's parade and muster will be the first in ten years. After the parade all the "tubs" will take part in the play-out to be held at the Sullivan Square playground. A number of large prizes are offered to the winners.

Denvir Chief Marshal.

Robert R. Denvir, president of the Charlestown Veterans' Association, will be chief marshal of the firemen's parade and muster. It will start from Hancock square at 9:30 and will go through the following streets. Main to Sullivan, Russell, Pearl, Bunker Hill, Elm, High, Monument square, South, East and North sides, Concord, Bunker Hill, Chelsea, City square, North side, Alford to the playground. The play-out will begin as soon as the first engine arrives at the grounds.

Representative Maurice J. Power, chief marshal of the afternoon parade, containing the largest number of civic and military bodies ever presented at a Bunker Hill Day celebration, will view the parade at the corner of Bunker and Elm streets.

Fitzgerald to See Parade.

Mayor Fitzgerald will see it from the reviewing stand at the Catholic Literary Union on Monument square. The parade will cover the following streets: Start from the corner of Elm and Bunker Hill streets, down Bunker Hill to Chelsea, City square, Park street, Common, Adams, Winthrop, Monument square east and north side, Bartlett, Elm, High, Monument square south side, Monument avenue, Warren, Pleasant, Main, Devens, Washington, Chapman, Main, Mishawum, Rutherford avenue, Cambridge, Sever, Gardner, Main, Bunker Hill to corner of Elm, where it will be dismissed.

In line will be sailors from the ships, marines from the Navy Yard, City Guards, Artillery, Signal Corps, Company L of the Sixth Regiment, seven companies of the Ninth Regiment, Ensign Worth Bagley, Colonel Frederick B. Bogan and Bunker Hill camps of the Spanish War Veterans, Bunker Hill Guards, Sarsfield Guards, John Boyle O'Reilly Guards and Captain Horan's company from the military division of A. O. H., Unity and Monument Guards of I. N. F., Ninth Regiment Veteran Association, Abraham Lincoln Camp, Sons of Veterans, Charlestown High School Cadets and Dudley School Cadets, Troop D of the First Squadron of Cavalry (Roxbury Horse Guards), Ninth Regiment Band, Kelly's Charlestown Artillery Band and Letter Carriers' Band, staff of Ninth Regiment, two detachments of Hospital Corps of Massachusetts State Militia.

STRIKE ON THE NEW TELEPHONE BUILDING

Forty builders' laborers went on strike to-day at High and Oliver streets, where the excavation for the New England Telephone Company's building is being made by the Wells Brothers Company. By the new wage schedule, accepted by the majority of the Boston contracting firms on June 1, excavators receive thirty cents an hour. Wells Brothers Company, Norcross Brothers Company and the George Fuller Company have not signed the agreement. They offer twenty-five cents an hour to the men.

Relics IN A DAY'S NEWS

Lincoln's Old Desk for Library.

HARTFORD, June 16.—Daniel Morgan, who was treasurer of the United States under the second administration of President Cleveland, has presented to the Connecticut State Library the historic old desk on which Abraham Lincoln signed the Declaration of Emancipation.

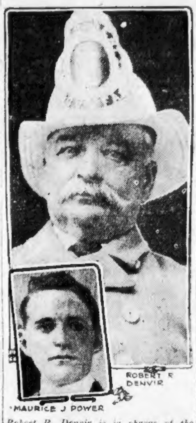
Bride Weds in Queen's Lace.

OSSINING, N. Y., June 16.—Wearing lace once worn by Queen Marie Antoinette, and later by the Empress Eugenie, Miss Emily Elizabeth Schwab, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gustav H. Schwab, was married at her father's country place at Scarborough, to Dr. William Worthington Herrick, of New York.

Busch Castle on Grant's Farm.

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—August A. Busch, son of Adolphus Busch, and vice-president of the Busch Brewing Corporation, will return to St. Louis from the East on or about June 23, when he will pass upon preliminary sketches for his country estate, to be erected on the General Grant farm, near St. Louis.

MARSHALS WHO LEAD BIG PARADES IN CHARLESTOWN



Robert R. Denvir is in charge of the morning Bunker Hill march. Maurice J. Powers heads the afternoon parade.

FLINT MINE ON DRAPER FARM

FOR SALE—A perfectly good ledge of hard blue flint. Will be sold on reasonable terms. F. O. B., at my farm in Milford. Call or write to Eben S. Draper, Governor's Office, State House.

The above advertisement may appear in the newspapers any day, now that Governor Draper finds he has a ledge of blue flint on his hands. Things are coming the Governor's way.

It was only yesterday that the Governor was created an honorary Doctor of Laws by Tufts College.

(Note—A Doctor of Laws is not necessarily one who doctors the laws.)

It is in order, of course, to address His Excellency as "Doctor," if one wishes. Intimate friends may go so far as "Doc."

Reverting to the flint ledge, this is blue flint, therefore much more classy than ordinary flint. It was discovered on the Governor's apple farm in Milford by Foreman George E. Pratt of the D. M. Pratt Artesian Well Company of Providence. Pratt is trying desperately to sink a 150-foot well for water to wet down the apple trees which the Governor is cultivating. Pratt is having the time of his artesian life sinking that well.

"Never did I run into such a hard ledge," he says. "Yesterday I drilled only ten inches. So far I have gone twenty-five feet into the ledge and there seems to be no end to it."

Blue flint is a hard proposition. Indians used it to make hammer heads. A brave knocked in the head with a blue flint went down for the count and never came to till he was scalped.

The Governor has been advised by friends to have a few hammers made up against next campaign.

SIX MORE NAMES FOR HALL OF FAME

NEW YORK, June 16.—Chancellor MacCracken of New York University has announced six more nominees for the Hall of Fame, making the 1910 list complete. The six names for the present year are: Robert McCormick, inventor; William McGuffey, educator; Lindley Murray, educator; the Rev. Father Abram Joseph Ryan, poet; Henry Rossiter Worthington, inventor and engineer; William Bradford, Governor and historian.

MRS. YERKES WILL RECEIVE $163,362

NEW YORK, June 16.—Mrs. Yerkes-Mizner, widow of Charles T. Yerkes of Chicago traction fame, and divorced wife of Wilson Mizner, will get $163,362 out of the proceeds of the estate of her first husband in New York, as administered by the receivership of the United States Circuit Court. A final decree was handed down by Judge Ward, in which that sum was set over for the widow's dower, the accounts of the receivers were approved and the receivers themselves discharged.

AVIATOR WRIGHT HAS NEW VIEW OF SUN

INDIANAPOLIS, June 16.—Orville Wright ascended more than 2,000 feet after dark. On reaching that altitude a light appeared far below the western horizon, and going still further up he was able to see the sun. The earth below was in darkness, yet he could look upon the light of day. Wright said the sight was one of the most thrilling and awe-inspiring he had ever witnessed.

ROOSEVELT'S SHIP DELAYED BY ROUGH SEAS

By Wireless to the Boston American

ON BOARD KAISERIN AUGUSTE VICTORIA, via Cape Race, Newfoundland, June 16.—Colonel Roosevelt's arrival in New York will probably be delayed until Saturday morning. Rough seas and head winds are holding back the vessel. It has been thus far a rough trip. Mrs. Roosevelt has not appeared on deck since she came aboard at Southampton.

The former President has, however, apparently enjoyed the rough weather. For the last day or two passengers have seen but little of him. Yesterday he passed in his stateroom. Last night he gave a dinner to a few friends who are on board.

The delay, owing to rough weather, makes it probable that the steamer will not dock before 8 o'clock Saturday morning instead of Friday night, the time called for on her schedule. It is possible some of the lost time may be made up to-day.

Since getting in touch with America by wireless a great flood of messages have been sent aboard for the ex-President. A message of welcome from President Taft is expected to-day. Colonel Roosevelt has expressed the hope that the public will send him only important tidings by wireless, as the messages he is obliged to answer are costly. He is willing to wait until he reaches New York for any but the most important messages.

Colonel Roosevelt is eager to reach home, but he talks enthusiastically of his trip, especially of his visits to European cities on the way back from the jungle. He has referred to the Vatican incident as the only event that marred the entire trip. He feels that some Americans may possibly misunderstand his position in that matter.

He has refused a number of invitations to address Fourth of July celebrations. He intimates that he wants to rest and has reiterated his statement that he intends to take part in no political discussions or make any speeches for two months after his arrival.

ROOSEVELT PARADE IS CONSTRUCTED UPON NEW LINES

NEW YORK, June 16.—The Roosevelt pageant for Saturday is being constructed on entirely new lines.

For the first time in the history of the United States the guest of honor, instead of being followed by as many marchers as can be assembled, will ride through organizations which are to line the curb.

The plan has been copied from the observed at the recent ceremonies attending the funeral of the King of England.

While barely three thousand troops, police and dignitaries with two bands are to precede and come after the former president, the reception committee estimates that 25,000 curb-liners will greet him as he passes up Fifth avenue. When Colonel Roosevelt lands at the Battery he will be escorted to the stand there, at which brief exercises will be held. These ended the procession will form in this order:

Roster of the Parade.

Squad of mounted police.
Seventh Regiment Band.
Roosevelt Rough Riders, escort to their former commander.
Colonel Roosevelt and Mayor Gaynor in carriage.
Secretary of the Navy Meyer and Captain Butt, representing President, in carriage.
Governors of New Jersey, New Mexico, New Hampshire, Washington, and West Virginia (but not of New York) in carriages.
Squadron A Band.
Spanish War Veterans.
Chairman Cornelius A. Vanderbilt and Roosevelt.
Reception committee in carriages.
Squad of mounted police.

This parade will tramp through "Curb liners" made up of many different organizations, political, fraternal and others.

Governor Hughes, who, through the interference of Republican old guardsmen, was refused an official invitation, and therefore will not receive Colonel Roosevelt, has written a personal letter of welcome.

The Roosevelt committee originally anticipated that demands for places in the parade and for hotel accommodations would equal if not exceed those for the Hudson-Fulton celebration. It was soon discovered that the committee was in error. Therefore, it concluded to re-arrange the scheme for the pageant.

Inquiry at the offices of the various railroad companies disclosed the fact that there is to be no tremendous travel to New York before or on Saturday. The Pennsylvania will run no special trains. The only order it has had for special cars was for two to bring one hundred Rough Riders on from St. Louis. The New York Central is providing one special train to bring on the Hamilton club from Chicago.

Oyster Bay's Program.

The following message was sent to Mr. Roosevelt by wireless to-day: "The American Peace and Arbitration League, of which you are honorary president, congratulates you on your safe return to your home and countrymen."

Ex-Governor James B. McCreary of Kentucky is president of the league and Henry Clews is treasurer.

In Oyster Bay plans have been completed for a home reception of the ex-President. A special train will take the Roosevelt party and the Nassau county reception committee from Long Island City to Oyster Bay, and there the country people will be gathered to shout a welcome. All the school children will also wave flags. Three speeches will be aimed at the colonel and fired, the band will play and then the Roosevelts will be allowed to go home to Sagamore Hill.

RICKARD AT WORK ON NEW PLANS FOR THE BIG FIGHT, SAYS TAD.

PROMOTER DECLARES JEFF-JOHNSON MILL WILL SURELY TAKE PLACE ON JULY 4.

By TAD.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—"Jeffries and Johnson will fight on July 4," said Tex Rickard last night as he leaned back in velvet cushions of the St. Francis Hotel, tapping his knee with a bunch of telegrams. "I say they'll fight, but I don't know just where. I saw Attorney-General Webb just a while ago and he told me that he would let me know positively by Friday whether we could hold it in San Francisco or not."

WILL NOT POSTPONE FIGHT.

"I know for a fact that by Sunday our Frisco arena will be pulled down or that we start some other place. We will hold the fight. You fellows don't need to think of starting East. I will hold this fight in California, Utah or Nevada on July 4 and both the big fellows are with me.

"By next Sunday if I don't start to build in Nevada or Utah you can take it from me that we will fight it off in San Francisco.

"No, Jeffries didn't say that he would kick about fighting in Nevada. I had Jim on the phone to-day, and he told me that he would fight on a barge, a desert or on an ocean liner. He said that he had trained too long for this, and if it had to be a private fight that he wanted it to come off. Yes, I was talking to Johnson, too. He isn't worried a bit. He said that if I wanted him to, that he will fight Jeffries on an electric wire. He was just as jolly as ever, and added that he intended to go right on with his training without a moment's rest.

"It's funny to me though, that the Governor didn't say something before putting the crusher on the fight. Here I am in $1,700 for ground room on that arena, about $17,000 for lumber and men and about $6,000 on other things like office rent, clerk hire and printing. Oh, I'd figure the whole thing at $25,000. We went right along selling tickets to-day though. It hurt our sale from the East, but we will have more orders for seats than we can fill anyway.

"I've had offers from six cities for the mill. One from Old Mexico."

Jim Coffroth was a bit smoked up over the thing. He says that the law under which the recent contests have been held is the same that applies to this show and cannot for the life of him understand how they will stop it.

"It's a wonder that the promoters were not tipped off a month ago before all this money was spent," says Jim.

"Jeff's made a good argument when he said he fought Corbett, Fitzsimmons, Ruhlin and Monroe under this same law and was not hindered. You know you can't let a man pick your pocket to-day and say it's all right and then to-morrow have the same thing done again, but declare it all wrong under the law. The law is the law just the same to-day and to-morrow, etc."

Joe Woodman is betting five hats that Langford and Kaufman fight here on Saturday afternoon. Joe declares that certain politicians are simply passing the buck to get in strong with certain other parties.

Spider Kelly declares that if a Governor says nix that it goes.

"I was chased out of Texas, Ohio and Arkansas by the Governors years ago," says the Spider, "and the fights were held in other States."

Once the bird says no, it goes, and right now I bet that they don't fight in Frisco.

This is certainly a sore town. There are more goats here to the square foot than there are cows in Moscow.

Manager Woods of the Hotel St. Francis will call a special meeting of the business men of San Francisco to-day to enter protest against stopping the fight.

Langford Bout to Go On.

At the big hotel we learn that at least 25 wires arrived cancelling reservations.

Louis Blot, who has the Langford-Kaufman fight billed here for Saturday, declares that they will go ahead with it. "I paid $1,200 for my license," he says "and if they allowed boxing under the law at the time I sent in my money they will allow it next Saturday or I'll know the reason why."

Wilson Mizner was being shaved in the St. Francis when the news was broken to him. The barber asked: "Shall I cut your hair, sir?"

"No, cut my throat," chirped Mizner. He hadn't been in town an hour when the bad news came to him.

Ketchel is around town full of smiles, making things merry. He does not think that there's a chance to stop the big mill and will go into training just as soon as his match with Langford is made.

Mizner says that if the thing is on the level and that fighting is done for that he and Steve will leave for the East immediately and get Jack Twin Sullivan for Milwaukee or Philadelphia for the Fourth of July date.

Jack Mc Keon, who is the right hand bower of the Gleason-Rickard deal, says that you can go and bet your socks that the big fight comes off at Eighth and Market streets, on the Fourth of July.

Gleason was full of smiles and happy gestures last night, but went to the hay early. He says that if they don't fight in Frisco they will in Nevada. You can't scare Jack out.

Tim McGrath says that they won't allow Frisco to get away with anything good except an earthquake.

SAY CHANGE WILL INJURE JEFFRIES

TRAINING CAMP, Rowardennan, Calif., June 16.—Jeffries commissioned H. H. Frazee, who is to manage his world tour after the fight, to telephone to Tex Rickard. He said to Rickard:

"Jeff told me to tell you that he wanted you to know that he was willing to fight anywhere. He said he did not regret the change himself, but felt sorry only for you and Jack Gleason."

Rickard informed Frazee of his plans of holding the fight in Nevada or Utah in case the battle which is to be waged in the courts goes against him, and Frazee agreed that his decision would fit exactly into the wishes of Jeffries.

Jeffries still follows his own judgment and does as much or as little work as he pleases. His handlers are anxious for him to do more actual boxing, but they believe he will not don the gloves any too often before the fight. They have to be very careful about offering him suggestions lest he do just the opposite.

The general opinion here seems to be that the Governor should have taken a stand against the fight when it was first announced that it would be held in San Francisco. The promoters are in so far that they declare it is very discouraging to Rickard and Gleason. However, there are many who will not believe that Gillett intends to stop the fight. Gillett's stand is likely to have a detrimental effect on Jeffries' training, as the big fellow undoubtedly changed his plans to-day on account of the bad news.

His admirers believe that he is in fine fettle and the only training which he needs to land him in the ring as good as he ever was is a little more boxing by which he can get back his eye. If the battle be held on July 4 outside of California, it is the opinion of fight critics that the change would do Jeffries more harm than Johnson.

JOHNSON, HE JES' EATS MO' CHICKEN AND DON'T WORRY!

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—Champion Jack Johnson is not in the least disturbed by the bad news handed out by Governor Gillett. He stowed away several chickens for breakfast and the only thing that seemed to be among him was the loss of his favorite buzz-wagon, which was stored away in a garage yesterday to remain there until after the fight.

He expressed regret at not being able to fight in San Francisco, but the next moment he was busy giving orders about his training. It's work first and study second at Camp Johnson now.

There will be no more long walks or runs through the park in the morning. Big Jack took the last Marathon yesterday. He and Trainer Flanagan held a long powwow during the afternoon, and it was finally agreed that the champion must hereafter devote most of his time to boxing, gymnasium work, bag punching and the like.

If there is anything on the champion's mind he is taking excellent care to keep it entirely to himself. He doesn't want anybody else to be in. After receiving the news of the interference of the Governor Johnson took a ride down town to see William T. Rook, the moving picture man, and to settle some minor business affairs. The champion and the picture man had a long talk regarding the shifting of the battle to some other city. However, the deal is closed so far as the champion is concerned. He will get the balance of his $50,000 just as soon as he steps into the ring with Jeffries. It does not matter where the ring is pitched.

CONGRESSMEN FORCED GILLETT TO STOP BIG FIGHT

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The move of the authorities of California to stop the Jeffries-Johnson prize fight is believed in Washington to have had its origin in a telegram which Representative Bennett (Republican) of New York sent to William R. Wheeler, president of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, on May 28.

The telegram was to the effect that the moral sentiment of the country was so opposed to the fight that unless it was prevented there was grave danger that Congress would take unfavorable action on the resolution now before it, naming San Francisco as the place for holding the international celebration of the opening of the Panama Canal.

RENO IS ANXIOUS TO HAVE THE BOUT TRANSFERRED THERE

RENO, Nev., June 16.—This city expects to get the Jeffries-Johnson fight if it is barred from San Francisco. It is known that Tex Rickard is anxious to have the fight come here, unless he can succeed in winning over the California authorities. Reno has offered to pay the State license of $1,000.

Ely is willing to build the arena and pay a bonus of $25,000, and Salt Lake is so anxious to get the fight that it would be willing to put up an arena. But despite all this Reno is believed to be the first choice. If the fight takes place in Nevada it will be pulled off without any interference whatever.

2 GOVERNORS AT LAWN FETE

With fair weather there is sure to be a throng at the Boston College lawn party Saturday at University Heights. The party is for the benefit of the building fund of the new college.

The principal speaker will be Governor Pothier of Rhode Island. Addresses are also to be made by Governor Draper, Mayor Fitzgerald, Daniel J. Gallagher and prominent Boston College men.

The most distinguished alumnus of Boston College, Archbishop O'Connell, is expected to visit the grounds and deliver a brief address.

The executive committee consists of the Rev. Florence J. Halloran, John A. Coulthurst, James A. Dorsey, Timothy J. Brinnin, Daniel J. Chapman, Dr. Timothy J. Murphy, John D. Drum, James H. Carney, John T. O'Hare, Dr. Charles F. Stack and Joseph H. Willis.

The reception committee has for its chairman, James Albert Dorsey, president of the Alumni Association.

PARENTS PUNISHED FOR NEGLECTING 3

The stories that their three children told a police officer, embracing want and utter neglect on the part of those who should maintain them, led to Dennis O'Brien of No. 57 Paul street, South End, being given one year in the House of Correction by Judge Ely to-day, at the same time that Judge Wentworth was imposing a sentence of two months upon Mrs. O'Brien. Both were charged with intoxication. Patrolman Livingstone said he found the children in two desolate rooms. They told him they were without food, that their mother had been arrested, and that their father was in a neighboring saloon. The children were sent to the Home for Destitute Catholic Children.

PRESIDENT RETURNS FROM OHIO VISIT

WASHINGTON, June 16.—President Taft returned here 6:30 a. m. to-day from Marietta, O. He remained aboard his private car, which was sidetracked at the Union Station, until 8 o'clock, when he went to the White House. He is to leave here early Saturday morning to attend commencement exercises at Villanova and Lincoln University, both in Pennsylvania, returning here Saturday night.

PENTECOST ON LAST VOYAGE

Captain Ernest H. Pentecost of the Cunard line steamship Saxonia, who two years ago married Miss Margaret Wentworth Peirce of Topsfield, sister of Millionaire "Tom" Peirce, is to quit the Cunard service and give up his seafaring life following his next round trip. The captain made this announcement when his ship docked at East Boston to-day.

Captain Pentecost has extensive interests in Mexico, and with Mrs. Pentecost will that country soon. They will remain in Mexico some months and upon their return will still continue to reside at Topsfield.

Captain Pentecost is forty-one, and has followed the sea for the past twenty-nine years. He was born in Sydney, New South Wales, and has commanded the Cherbourg, the Ultonia, the Pannonia and the Saxonia, being the youngest commander in the Cunard service.

BALLOON RUNS OFF WITH BOY IN OHIO

COLUMBUS, O., June 16.—A dirigible balloon, the property of Cromwell Dixon, broke away from its mooring at Chillicothe, carrying with it Freddie Meyers, aged ten. The balloon soared to a height of half a mile before the hydrogen gas became partially exhausted and then descended. Dixon made a landing in the street. While he was at work on the balloon, Meyers was placed in the car to balance it. A rope broke and the balloon shot into the air. It made all sorts of evolutions in high wind. The balloon was carried five miles out of town. The boy stepped out unhurt.

"TAFT A FAILURE," SAYS LAUGHLIN

DES MOINES, Ia., June 16.—A tolerant, weak, well-intentioned failure was the description of President Taft given by Professor James Lawrence Laughlin of the University of Chicago in a commencement address delivered before the graduating class of Drake University.

TEST FIGHT EDICT BY LANGFORD-KAUFMAN GO IS PROMOTERS' PLAN

By C. E. VAN LOAN.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—The sudden move on the part of Governor Gillett has thrown this fight-mad community into a state of panic.

Governor Gillett's letter to Attorney-General Webb, directing him to take steps to stop the Jeffries-Johnson battle, was a bombshell inasmuch as the Governor had frequently stated that while not in favor of the fight, he saw no legal way of preventing it.

The news flew like a prarie fire and inside of an hour the hotel lobbies were filled with excited men, and the newspaper offices were besieged by hundreds eager for a confirmation of the rumor. Attorney-General Webb furnished the confirmation.

Under State Statutes.

"The Governor," said he, "has directed me to take such steps as may be necessary to stop the fight. This matter has nothing to do with city ordinances, or city officials, because the action we shall take will proceed under the statutes of the State of California. As to the character of the action we shall take I will say nothing at this time save that it will be such as is necessary to accomplish the Governor's purpose."

Tex Rickard, at his downtown office, heard the news and hurried at once to see Attorney-General Webb. Rickard was accompanied by his attorney, Henry Dinkelspiel. Rickard listened silently while the Attorney-General read from the Governor's letter, and after that the talking was done by Dinkelspiel, who entered into the legal aspects of the case.

Shortly before he went into conference with the Attorney-General Rickard stated that the fight would surely take place.

"If we are not allowed to hold it in this State," said Rickard, "I am prepared to bring the affair off either in Nevada or Utah. Unless I receive assurance that the authorities will not interfere with the match I will immediately make my arrangements to transfer it to another State. The fight will take place."

District Attorney Fickert was amazed when informed of the Governor's action. "Governor Gillett has had one long administration," he said, "during which many boxing exhibitions have been promoted in the State and it seems strange that he should single out any one fight as an exception. If one fight is illegal, then all must fall under the ban, and if this fight is stopped, all fights within the State must likewise be illegal."

Permits Limited Round Bouts.

The law of the State of California permits limited round boxing exhibitions. It now remains for the Attorney-General to prove before the fact that this is to be a prize fight and not a boxing exhibition. The Supreme Court of the State has never been called upon to define the difference between a boxing exhibition and a prize fight, the one being legal and the other illegal.

Rickard, the silent man, says he stands ready to take the fight out of the State at a moment's notice. He is not yet convinced that the Attorney-General can proceed against the fight without an act of the Legislature behind him, but Rickard also realizes that every day of uncertainty knocks thousands of dollars off the gate receipts of the big mill.

Sam Langford and Al Kaufman are slated to meet here on Saturday. Attorney-General Webb has received word to proceed against this match just as he will proceed against the big affair for the championship; so that by Saturday at least there will be a definite line on what the fight fans of the country may expect from the State of California.

BOMB EXPLODED IN TENEMENT

NEW YORK, June 16.—The explosion of a black hand bomb in a tenement at No. 1143 First avenue to-day threw 175 persons into a panic. As the building rocked the occupants fled to the fire escapes, being cut off by the destruction of two flights of concrete stairs. They were rescued by firemen.

The explosion followed threats to extort $5,000 from Frank Fassett, who, with his wife and two children, was thrown from bed by the force of the bomb. The lower part of the building was wrecked.

NEGLECTED CHILDREN TAKEN TO REFUGE

Margaret, thirteen; Johanna, eight, and William G., twelve, children of William Conley of No. 89 Dresser street, South Boston, were in the Juvenile Court room in the South Boston District Court before Judge Fallon to-day arraigned as neglected children on complaint of an agent of the Society of the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. They were committed to the Home for Destitute Catholic Children on Harrison avenue.

ALIEN PUPILS CALL ON MAYOR

All business at City Hall was suspended for half an hour to-day while thirty-five pupils from the Washington Allston school in the West End showed Mayor Fitzgerald and many interested city employes what a year's education in a Boston school had done for them.

Less than a year ago but few of the children could speak the English language. To-day they proudly serenaded the Mayor and sang three verses of America to demonstrate their accomplishments in the new language.

The little ones marched into the Mayor's office under the direction of their teacher, Miss Teresa Dacey. Mayor Fitzgerald made a short speech and presented each of his callers with an engraving of City Hall, to which he added his signature.

The class, which is ungraded, consists of Poles, Italians and Russians.

RICKARD SAYS WORLD-BATTLE WILL BE HELD

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

JEFFRIES' TRAINING CAMP, ROWARDENNAN, June 16.—As a knockout blow Governor Gillett's letter to the Attorney-General has made Jack Johnson's uppercut and Jim Jeffries' swinging beam left dwindle to insignificance of love taps. To say it cast the training camps into the deepest gloom is to put the case mildly.

During the whole day's training, sparring partners, masseurs and visitors sat under the redwoods. Jeffries, who had intended to box on his outdoor platform called off work and grabbed his fishing rod. It looked as though he wanted some excuse to get away by himself and talk things over.

When Jeffries first heard the news he remarked, sententiously: "I don't believe it," but his face hardened as he said "I have always understood and still understand that the law permitted limited round contests.

"It is folly to argue that this affair of ours is any different than the bouts Gillett and other Governors before him have permitted to take place for all these years in San Francisco. I have heard somebody say that politics has something to do with this but I don't see how politics can interfere with anything that is supposed to be in accordance with the law and for which an annual license fee is charged by the city government.

No Let Up in Work.

"No, I can't bring myself to believe that the Governor has really taken the stand they say he has and I will refuse to believe it until I receive official news from Tex Rickard and Jack Gleason."

"You will go along with your work then, as usual," was asked of Jeff. "Of course I will. I will make no change until I hear further from the promoters. The pity of it, too, is that my work is practically done. I am in condition now, and could fight three days from now if necessary."

"It is hard, very hard," said the big fellow, after looking at the ground for several moments as though in a brown study.

"I have worked for fifteen months and it would be tough now if all I have gone through is to go for nothing."

"How about fighting in Nevada?" was asked Jeff.

"Well, it would be mighty short notice for Rickard and Gleason to switch to Nevada now, and build their arena and have everything ready by the Fourth," said Jim. "However, as I said, I am going to wait until I hear more. It will be time enough to talk Nevada when it is certain that the fight is not to take place in California."

CHARLESTOWN GETS NOISE PRIVILEGES

According to the interpretation placed upon the city ordinances by Commissioner O'Meara regarding the use of fireworks such displays on Bunker Hill Day must be confined to Charlestown exclusively. In his instructions to patrolmen throughout the city regarding fireworks on June 17 and July 4, the Commissioner calls particular attention to this, besides cautioning them to see that no firearms or horns are used by the celebrators. Firecrackers exceeding two inches in length are tabooed this year. The hours set for the lawful use of firecrackers and fireworks are from 6 a. m. to 10 p. m.

TAFT'S WELCOME TO ROOSEVELT ON RETURN TO HIS NATIVE LAND

In his message of welcome on the home-coming of Roosevelt, President Taft refers to the "royal progress" in Europe of the former President and declares that the attention and respect shown Mr. Roosevelt have not been equaled since Grant made his tour about the world. In his message, which is to appear in The Outlook Saturday, the President says that the European experience of the former President "will make him still more valuable to his country as a statesman."

By PRESIDENT TAFT.

THE return of Mr. Roosevelt from Africa and Europe ought to arouse and will arouse as great a demonstration of welcome from his countrymen as any American ever received. After the heavy cares of the presidential office for nearly eight strenuous years he sought rest by contrast in the depths of the African forests and in great physical exertion in the hunting of large game and the procuring of valuable specimens of the fauna of the Dark Continent.

No one who knows Mr. Roosevelt, and no one who understands the character of the African climate and the kind of hunting in which he was engaged, can minimize the dangers from disease and actual combat with wild beasts to which he was exposed. It goes without saying that wherever there was danger he welcomed its excitement and delighted to observe and record its effect upon his own emotions. His trip to Africa was planned with the thoroughness of a military campaign, and his plans were executed with the vim and energy that might be expected.

In view of what happened when he reached civilization, however, those of us who had the privilege of talking with him before he went can afford to have some fun at his expense in his frequently avowed determination to avoid all public functions and entertainments. He expected to call on the persons in authority in each place which he visited, to have half an hour's conversation with the ruler if he would receive him, and then to go on his way like a private citizen, seeing the things of interest and hurrying home. Instead of that, his path from the time he landed in Europe until he sailed has been a royal progress, and the courtesy and attention and profound respect shown him, not only by kings and the leading men of every country, but also by the people, have not been equaled since Grant made his tour about the world. This is the more remarkable because Grant had the deserved reputation of being a great military leader who had commanded a million men and won a war of gigantic extent; while Mr. Roosevelt's achievements which have given him the standing before the world have been almost wholly in peaceful times, and in a war against civil wrong and corruption, which ordinarily is not spectacular and does not command world-wide attention.

The remarkable character of the reception that he has had in Europe shows the deep impress that his personality, his character, his aims and his methods as a civil and social reformer have made upon the world at large.

He was always, of course, a man of great breadth of vision and catholicity of view; but he comes back to us now with his experience enriched by observation of each country of Europe from a point somewhat behind the scenes. With his notable power of quick acquisition of the circumstances of a situation, his close and more or less intimate association with the rulers of the leading countries of Europe and with their prominent statesmen has given him an insight into world politics that will make him still more valuable to his country as a statesman.

The people of this country will give him a welcome from their hearts, first, because of their affection for him and the fact that he has returned to them safe and sound from a perilious expedition; second, because since he left them they have seen the people and the great men and the monarchs of other countries tender their profound respect to the same qualities in the man that his own people had previously noted and loved; and, third, because by his personal touch, the sincerity and strength of his deliverances, he has increased the prestige of Americans throughout the world.

INSANE MAN SHOT MERCHANT

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 16.—The man who shot and killed Joseph Novagrski, second-hand dealer at No. 53 South Main street, yesterday, and then committed suicide by shooting himself in Novagrski's cellar, was identified to-day as the same man who held up Miss Flora Plant last Friday and shot at her, and who shot William Dyson recently. His name is Fred LeClair. He was employed by the Pawtucket Gas Company. He lived with his mother at No. 297 Pleasant street, Pawtucket. It is thought that he was insane.

The body was seen to-day by Miss Flora Plant. She said he was the man who shot at her. The police had been vainly trying to trail her assailant.

LeClair entered Novagrski's store when the old man was alone. Patrolman Blessing heard a shot. He found Novagrski dead. Blessing started toward the cellar, but was sent back by a bullet through his helmet.

Firemen flooded the cellar to drive the murderer out. Two shots were heard. The body of LeClair was found leaning against a cellar post knee deep in water. The frenzied man had taken his own life rather than be captured alive.

KELIHER OBLIGED TO CANCEL DATE

A Washington dispatch says that Congressman John A. Keliher has been obliged to cancel his engagement to speak before the Catholic Literary Society, at the Bunker Hill day celebration at Charlestown this evening. He found that debate probably would close on the general deficiency bill to-day. Mr. Keliher wishes to propose several amendments to the bill.

ASK FUNDS FOR 4TH DISPLAY

Contributions from the general public in order that plans for celebration of the national birthday may be successfully carried out are asked in an appeal issued by the safe and sane Fourth of July committee of the Boston-1915 movement. The appeal is as follows:

"In view of the fact that we are to have a Fourth of July parade which will do honor to the presence of 30,000 teachers in attendance at the convention of the National Educational Association and to the President of the United States, who has definitely promised to be in Boston on the morning of the Fourth to review the parade; in view, also, of the fact that the executive committee of the Fourth of July committee of 150 has voted to supply children all over the city with ice cream, as they plan to do in New York, we, as a committee, ask the public for their subscriptions to make this effort of the committee a complete success.

"We are informed that New York City raises all its funds for the Fourth of July through public subscription, and we trust that pride in their city and an earnest desire to promote a 'Safe and Sane Fourth of July' will bring a hearty and liberal response from many citizens of Boston to the request which we make to them for funds.

"We have asked Robert Treat Paine, Jr., of No. 16 State street to act as custodian of the sums which may be subscribed."

Our Friends, The Animals

Lioness Battles Sixty Men.

NEW YORK, June 16.—A three-year-old lioness battled with twenty men when they were putting her in a den in the lion house in the Bronx Zoo. She was Niobe, lassoed by "Buffalo" Jones on his recent hunt for big game with the moving picture camera and lariat, near Nairobi, Africa. Niobe arrived by steamer two days ago, nicely done up in a package five feet high, ten feet long and eight feet wide. A trainer shook his hand at her through the bars. The animal hurled herself at him. She struck the bars with a roar, and pawed the air outside with one leg that came through. It took all the twenty attaches to drive her into the den.

Canine Serves as Doctor.

NEW YORK, June 16.—"Buster," a bulldog owned by Mrs. Bella Karner of No. 188 Powell street, Brooklyn, yesterday played M. D. Miss Dora Levine, nineteen, with another young woman, was playing ball on the roof and fell eighteen feet, landing on the back of "Buster." The dog's spring-like body saved the girl from serious injury.

Lonesome Dog Commits Suicide.

NEW YORK, June 16.—A brindle bull dog committed suicide in a cell in the West Sixty-eighth street station yesterday by beating its head against the cell wall, apparently from grief over being separated from its master. Patrolman Goodyear found the dog at Sixty-second street and Amsterdam avenue and took it to the station house.

MRS. DOXEY TRIED AGAIN.

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—The preliminary hearing of Mrs. Dora E. Doxey on a charge of bigamously marrying William J. Erder, for whose death she was recently tried and acquitted, was called before Justice of the Peace A. E. Werremeyer at Clayton to-day.

NEARING HOME

PLAN TRIPS TO INSURE A SANE FOURTH

A shrewd suggestion, relative to the universal cry for a "Sane Fourth of July" is made by the White Mountain contingent of Greater Boston. This contingent is composed of people who go annually to the "New England Alps," as the noble New Hampshire ranges are called. Hundreds, even thousands of Bostonians flock to the White Mountains every Summer. Some go merely for week-end trips. The Fourth of July this year is practically a triple holiday on account of the Saturday and Sunday immediately preceding. It is suggested that an ideal way of spending the Fourth in a "sane" manner would be to take the children on a trip through the mountains, where splendid scenery, invigorating air and the novelty of a mountain sojurn would more than make up for the dangers and doubtful pleasures of a noisy, gunpowdery Fourth in the city.

This "Fourth in the mountains" idea comes happily this year on account of the early opening of the White Mountain season. The Boston & Maine railroad, which taps the mountain country at every advantageous tourist point, has been waging an extensive campaign of education along the line of early season. This year the mountain vacation period begins earlier and ends later than ever.

It is estimated that over three thousand people went to the White Mountains over the last July Fourth. This year the number of excursionists is expected to be larger.

There are to be many improvements in accommodations for tourists and sojourners. A new hotel is being constructed on Mount Washington to replace the famous old Summit House, which was destroyed by fire. Owing to weather conditions, it is doubtful if the new hostelry will be ready this season.

Climbing burros and mountain ponies have been put in at some of the big hotels for the convenience of sightseeing guests. The paths and roads are in splendid condition. The mountain district, as ever, is an ideal region for walks and drives.

BOSTON LODGE TO INSTALL OFFICERS

The degree team of Boston Lodge No. 34, Loyal Order of Moose, will journey to Lynn, Sunday evening, to exemplify the ritualistic work at the installation of officers of Lynn Lodge No. 261. Hon. David B. Shaw, orator of Boston Lodge, will talk on the growth of the order in the New England states.

TROOPS MAKE NEW 'GOOD SHOT' RECORD

MANILA, June 16.—It was learned today that a world's record was broken last night by the new batteries on Corregidor Island at the entrance to Manila Bay, when eleven out of twelve shots from the six-inch guns hit the bullseye.

MOODY RETIREMENT BILL NOT OPPOSED

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The House judiciary committee today considered the bill to retire Associate Justice Moody of the Supreme Court. The bill will be reported favorably to the House to-morrow and it is expected will pass without opposition.

FOUR INJURED IN A MATTRESS FIRE

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 16.—Four firemen were hurt and one man collapsed from fright at the sight of flames that damaged the plant of the Buffalo Mattress Company last night to the extent of $75,000. Traffic on the Michigan Central, the New York Central and the Grand Trunk lines from Canada was blocked for more than an hour.

GLIDDEN CARS OFF ON A RUN TO ALABAMA

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 16.—The Glidden tourists left here at 9 a. m. for Sheffield, Ala., and were escorted out of the city by 200 or more local cars. The parade through the city was led by cars filled with handsomely gowned young women whose machines drew up in double lines at the custom house, allowing the travelers to pass between.

The hardest day's run in the history of any Glidden tour was the fate of the tourists in the second day's run of the 1910 event.

For more than seventy miles between Louisville and Bowling Green, the cars bumped along over what was once a macadam pike, but what is now only a bunch of cobble stones strewn along the road.

Practically not a car escaped tire trouble in bunches and the cars which came through without penalties could be counted on the fingers of one hand.

No official scores were given out, however, because Starter Ferguson's Reo car could not get through.

After Bowling Green going improved considerably, though the mountain roads and the streams to be forded made the going anything but easy until within twenty miles of Nashville. As far as is known the only perfect score cars of the day were two Premiers and Chalmers numbers 4 and 5.

To-day's run to Sheffield, Ala., is 119.07 miles, which must be made in six hours by the big cars. There is no prospect of a great deal of road improvement, according to Pilot Dal Lewis.

MAN SAYS HE DODGED KNIVES AND A TEAPOT

The Suffolk Divorce Court to-day furnished details of the matrimonial difficulties of two Roxbury couples, one husband alleging that his wife's conduct had caused him to become his own tailor and housekeeper, coupled with the assertion that a portion of his time was given to dodging utensils which she hurled at his head.

James F. Walsh of Roxbury contended that his wife had voiced the sentiment that she wished him in the fiery regions on more than one occasion. The couple were married on November 4, 1898, at Cambridge, and later on lived in the Roxbury district.

"My wife once threw a flatiron at me," declared Walsh. "I dodged, but it struck me on the leg, and after that she left me. When I went to live with her again we had more trouble and she cut me with a bread knife.' She was always sulky and said her home was hell.

Judge Richardson reserved decision.

"One afternoon in 1907, a wagon loaded with furniture drove up to the house and she told me her relatives were coming to live with us. That brought on another argument, and she cut me on the thumb with a knife.

"When I came home nights there was nothing to eat in the house, and I had to sew the buttons upon my clothes. Once she threw a teapot at me, which struck me on the chest. She said that nothing would give her greater pleasure than to see me burning in hell."

Arthur R. Brown of No. 101 Curtain street, Roxbury, told the Court that his wife, Lillian, had left him after he had complained of her keeping late hours. The Judge asked:

"Have you any children?" "Yes," replied Brown. "I have one child." "Have you supported that child since your wife left you?" Brown answered that he had not. Judge Richardson said: "This libellant has not supported his child, and I cannot believe that the wife would leave his home without some cause."

COURT REHEARING ON PULLMAN CAR CUT

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The railroads affected by the recent decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission reducing Pullman car rates from Chicago to points in Nebraska will be granted a rehearing of the case to-morrow by the commission. At a preliminary hearing in Chicago the companies produced new evidence which they say has not been presented to the Interstate Commerce Commission. G. S. Fernald, representing the Pullman company; E. C. Lindley of the Great Northern, C. W. Bunn of the Northern Pacific and Burton Henson of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad will present the case of the railroads.

TWO BOYS HELD AS POSTOFFICE THIEVES

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., June 16.—United States Inspector Boutell, of Portsmouth, and Deputy Sheriff Clarkson of Kittery Point to-day arrested Edgar Emery, aged 18, and Wilson Long, aged 19, both of Kittery, on a charge of breaking and entering and robbing the U. S. Postoffice at Kittery, last Tuesday night. The boys belong to respectable families. They were taken before U. S. Commissioner Bradley of Portland, Me., who held them for a hearing to-morrow. After entering the postoffice all the robbers got was one check for $2.50.

WIFE GETS DIVORCE ON CRUELTY GROUNDS

Mrs. Isabele Nute of Roxbury, was granted a divorce decree nisi by Judge Richardson to-day after she had told the court a few things about Nute, now in parts unknown. They were married in 1908. Some accusations she made were:

"His consistent jags and his profanity were trivial compared with his cruel and abusive treatment. After we had been married two weeks he picked me up and would have thrown me through a window, only another woman in the house came when I screamed. Once he threw a cuspidor at me, but I dodged it."

HAMILTON PLANS TO FLY TO-MORROW

NEW YORK, June 16.—Charles K. Hamilton, the aviator, visited the city hall today to present to Mayor Gaynor the letter he brought from Mayor Reyburn of Philadelphia, by aeroplane in his recent round-trip flight between this city and the City of Brotherly Love. "I found the propellor loaned me by Miss Todd would not fit" he told the reporters and that precludes any flight by me over New York or anywhere else today. I expect to get a new propeller from Hammondsport in time for a flight to-morrow or the next day."

QUINCY GIRL, WHO IS MAKING HERSELF A GREAT PIANIST

MARGUERITA PENDERGAST.

GIRL SURPRISES MUSICAL SHARPS

Musicians and scores of friends of pretty little twelve-year-old Marguerita Pendergast of Houghs Neck, Quincy, are to-day congratulating her and her parents because of the splendid piano recital she gave last night at Steinert Hall.

A large audience of musical experts as well as friends of the Pendergast family assembled in the hall to hear the child-wonder perform at the piano. From memory entirely she played Verdi's "Il Trovatore" transcription. The entire transcription was played by little Miss Pendergast without music before her.

At the conclusion of her remarkable performance the audience burst into hearty and prolonged applause, and several large and beautiful floral pieces were given to her by her admirers. She was also presented with a fine music bag by her father. When she concludes her musical education in this country it is the intention of her parents to send her to Europe.

DR. CLARK CONDEMNS HIGH SCHOOL FRATS

High school secret societies are un-American, un-democratic, and sometimes godless and immoral. I have received scores of letters from pastors, teachers and parents who say that these charges against secret societies are only too true, and who wish to aid in stamping them out. While I condemn the high school dances, the dissipation, late hours and unwholesome surrounding conditions in some of our high schools, my chief argument is against the secret societies. They are an evil which parents and educators alike should seek with all their hearts to stem.—Rev. Francis E. Clark, President of the Christian Endeavor, in a published statement.

FIGHT TO BAR OUT LORIMER WITNESSES

CHICAGO, June 16.—Attorneys for representative Lee O'Neil Browne, charged with buying votes to aid the election of Senator Lorimer, to-day continued in their legal effort to exclude from the case the testimony of witnesses who have been called to corroborate the testimony of Representative C. A. White. The defence suffered another shock to-day when Representative Joseph S. Clarke of Vandalia appeared as a witness against Browne. Clark is under indictment at Springfield in connection with State House furniture deals.

Woman's True Friend

Experimenting with new and untried medicines is foolish, and often dangerous. It would take a medicine more than forty years, to prove itself so universally good as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. During all that time it has been woman's favorite medicine—a restorative tonic, uplifting and invigorating the nervous and discouraged and giving them the final touch of perfect health.

Women use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription in preference to all other advocated medicines for it contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs—is not anything like advertised, secret, or patent medicines—does not claim to be able to do impossible things.

THE ONE REMEDY for women devised by a regularly graduated physician of vast experience in woman's ailments, and adapted to her delicate organism.

THE ONE REMEDY good enough that its makers are not afraid to print its every ingredient on its outside wrapper.

You can't afford to allow yourself to be over-persuaded into accepting any secret nostrum as a substitute for this honest square-deal non-secret medicine. Don't do it. No honest druggist will attempt to cheat you in this way. He who does should be rebuked and avoided. Doctors prescribe Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for their worst cases because they know what it contains and know its ingredients to be of the very best.

It's well now and then to gently cleanse out bowel germs that breed weakness, cause foul breath, loss of appetite, dizziness and headache. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets keep bowels sweet and clean. Recommended by druggists because of their purity, goodness, and active gentleness.

World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., Pres., Buffalo, N. Y.

OFFICERS HUNT FOR SMUGGLED GEMS IN LINER

The customs authorities are conducting a systematic and thorough search of the baggage and effects of the 1,015 steerage passengers, who reached East Boston on the Cunard Line steamship Saxonia to-day. Tips from abroad, given the Treasury Department at Washington, and asserting that gems and jewelry were to be smuggled into this country by schemers, who would use the steerage of the steamer in the attempt, brought quick action on the part of the local officials.

Major J. Homer Edgerly, deputy surveyor of the port, was in charge of the investigation at the dock. He refused to give out any information, except to state that he was acting upon instructions from Washington.

It is believed that the gang abroad backing the smuggling plans, realizing that the baggage of saloon passengers of late had been subjected to particular scrutiny, decided to shift their endeavors to the steerage, with the hope of better success. Some few months ago, a similar attempt was made, two men being secured who had several thousand dollars' worth of watches and gems concealed about their clothing.

Lazy Liver

At this time of the year the system has clogged up, the pores are closed, the blood is thin and circulation is poor. You have no energy for business or pleasure. You suffer from headaches and sleeplessness. Your skin is yellow and your tongue is coated. Food does little good. All these indicate that your liver is not doing its work and the bile is not being carried off. You need something to awaken the liver.

Warner's Safe Cure

is an absolutely safe and permanent remedy for all diseases of the liver. It corrects the functional trouble by increasing the flow of bile into the bowels to a healthy standard and keeping it so. It aids in removing the waste material that obstructs the circulation of the liver, and by its tonic and purifying properties brings to a condition of perfect harmony all the organs of the body.

It is made from the fresh juices of plants and medicinal roots, gathered at the proper season in various quarters of the globe. Men skilled in botany and chemistry compound it. Put up in 50c and $1.00 sizes and sold by druggists everywhere.

In diseases of the liver the bowels are usually constipated on account of the flow of bile being lessened. You should take Warner's Safe Pills, purely vegetable, absolutely free from injurious substances, a perfect laxative. They do not gripe or leave any bad after effects. 25 cents a box.

To convince every sufferer from diseases of the liver, kidneys, bladder and blood that WARNER'S SAFE CURE will absolutely cure, a sample bottle and also a sample box of Warner's Safe Pills will be sent FREE OF CHARGE, postpaid, to any one who will write WARNER'S SAFE CURE CO., Rochester, N. Y. and mention having seen this liberal offer in Boston Daily American.

Perpetual Youth

Let me tell you how to regain all your old-time vim, vigor and strength and feel like a two-year-old. The secret of youth is vitality. Give my wondrous new "Health Belt" a chance and it will carry you through any business, mental or physical strain you may be under. It adds the electro-tonic element to nerves, tissue and blood. You feel better immediately. Sure cure for rheumatism, lame back, indigestion, etc. No drugs. No privations. Call or write for free 86-page book explaining all.
Dr. D. G. Sanden Co., 501 Washington St., Boston. Hours, 9 to 6.

Biliousness

"I have used your valuable Cascarets and I find them perfect. Couldn't do without them. I have used them for some time for indigestion and biliousness and am now completely cured. Recommend them to everyone. Once tried, you will never be without them in the family."—Edward A. Marx, Albany, N.Y.

Pleasant, Palatable, Potent, Taste Good. Do Good. Never Sicken, Weaken or Gripe. 10c, 25c, 50c. Never sold in bulk. The genuine tablet stamped C C C. Guaranteed to cure or your money back. 928

HERRIMAN ON HIS WAY EAST FROM COAST

By GEORGE HERRIMAN.

A few days agone and I could have staked the family pottery that I would be chin deep in rosin watching the Jeffries limited heave a load of anthracite off the championship main line.

I had it all doped out centrifugally, centripedally and in the fourth dimension, when bing! comes word to come to the big village in the shadow of the Metropolitan Tower.

It was a separation, most bitter and acrimonious, as the gentleman said when he emerged from a swim in the old brook to find that his entire garmenture, from top coat to chest protector, was guarded by what he had at first taken to be a gentle cow, but what now proved to be the bossy's two-year-old brother.

Five Days of Fight Talk.

However, the trip was a thirty-six-hundred-mile conversation on the results of the big soiree in the breeze-blown bay burg on the next birthday of our great nation.

There was some difficulty in getting the heavy overland started for the Atlantic, as the engineer and a Pullman porter were engaged in serious argument over the big contest, which was settled by the fireman creasing his coal shovel on the berth juggler's bean.

Every passenger on the train had a return ticket anchored on the inside of his undershirt, so that all the Jimmy Valentines in the universe couldn't have chiselled it loose.

The dining car waiter would hand you your bowl of rolled oats in the morning, with a few words about hoping the weather would be nice on the Fourth of July, and by the time he'd slip the finger-bowl on you he'd whisper something behind his crumb tray about what odds you'd give him on the fight, as he had six bits that wasn't occupied.

The smoking car was the scene of many a hot controversy, sometimes requiring the help of the train crew to separate the controversers. While we were crossing the rather warm Colorado desert a fat man in upper number one held a levee with a deaf gent in lower thirteen as to moral propinquities of the big fight. The fat man was running well ahead of his ticket when the train hit a sharp curve and he rolled out of his bunk. The deaf man, thinking the debate still on, held loud talk with himself until breakfast time.

It is with much envy the east-bound tourists view the passing of a west-bound train. They hang out of the windows and gaze with sad and wistful eyes at the merry ones hitting the grit toward the sunset.

Any Old Way to Get West.

Its an unusual thing to see the blanket stiffs trekking West at this season.

"A" number one's arrows are pointing due west all along the old Santa Fe trail.

The decks of the west-bound trains are sagging with "boes"; the beams are polished bright with a mess of them, the tanks and the blinds are well patronized, and, as for rattlers, they look like a Moe Finnegan chowder.

At every water tank in Kansas you'll find a delegation of corn rustlers waiting for the train from the West to get the latest news from the camps.

Iowa farmers camp at the stations to glean the last reports.

In Illinois, Indiana and Ohio the rurals are pestering everybody who rides through from California about how good Jeff's wind is, and has the big smoke got as much fire under him as reports indicate.

Well, it is an interest wide as the American continent. You can't get away from it. Some of us wouldn't know whether Roosevelt was the Mayor of Newark, N. J., or the name of a new face bleach, but who in the United States and the rest of the world hasn't some fixed idea on the coming pugilistic fiesta.

Oh, well, those whose lot it will be to stay at home can well be glad that such vivid story tellers as Tad, H. Marcheese Walker, Van Loan and A. "Hen" Lewis are on the job to give us the full particulars.

Early reports make it look doubtful that the St. Louis Cardinals would line up in the second game with the Doves at the South End grounds to-day. The fans are getting used to having every series broken up by rain and would be disappointed if something of the kind didn't butt in and give the Cardinals' games a jolt.

As the Mound City team looks about the brand of goods that is easy for the Doves, the postponement of any contests at this time has its drawbacks, as scrappy Bresnahan and his bunch won't be around again for some time.

If the game to-day fails to materialize there are two scraps on the card for tomorrow, Bunker Hill Day, both morning and afternoon.

With Buster Brown and Cliff Curtis yet to be heard from, the visitors haven't any chance to get much in this series.

The Red Sox will try hard to land another Tiger pelt. To beat Mullin would give any team lots of confidence and they will probably beat Jennings for the big end of the present engagement.

The Roxbury Sporting Club of Big Noise fame tenders a reception to their women friends at the club's rooms Jackson square, to-night. This club has many members prominent in sporting circles, including Tommy Madden of the Red Sox, Bill Cooney, Otto Deininger, Linberg, Mulvery and many other ball players.

REVERE TEAM GETS STRONG PLAYERS

The Revere Independent baseball team have been strengthened by securing the services of Hunter, formerly manager of the Everett and Winthrop Athletics, who will play second base and Jameson, a catcher from York Beach. The Revere team plays the Brookline Gym boys on June 17th, and the strong American Telephone team on June 18. Manager Webb would like to arrange a game away from home for June 25, with a good strong aggregation. Telephone Revere 67-5, or address to Revere, Mass.

PAPKE WAGERS $5,000 HE CAN STOP KETCHEL

Billy Papke, who is to box Jack Twin Sullivan at the Armory Club next Tuesday night, is out on the trail of one Stanley Ketchel. The Illinois Thunderbolt is out with a defi to Ketchel to meet him at any time or place for charity. Moreover, Papke is willing to come across with $5,000 that he can put it over Stanley.

In a telegram to the sporting editor of the AMERICAN, sent from Kewanee late last night, Papke tells a few things. List to the message:

> I will leave here for Boston tomorrow to box Jack Twin Sullivan. Will box Ketchel any time or place and bet five thousand dollars I can stop him. Thought I would get Ketchel on my way East, but when he heard I was coming he called off everything and started for the Coast to Abe Attell-it with Langford.
>
> BILLY PAPKE.

Papke and Ketchel have met three times. In their first bout at Los Angeles, on September 7, 1908, Papke put Ketchel away in the 10th round. On November 26, of the same year he was knocked out by Stanley in the 11th round of their bout in Frisco. On July 5, of last year, Papke again lost to Ketchel at Colma.

Papke is due in Boston early Saturday morning. His bout with Sullivan at the Armory Club should be one of the best matches seen here this year.

The Thunderbolt is in good form. He evidenced that in his bout with Al Goodell at Kansas City, Mo., Tuesday night, putting Al away in the second round of a scheduled ten-round go.

DORCHESTER HORSES RACE ON SPEEDWAY

JIG STONE TO TACKLE CARR

In the midst of all the Jeffries-Johnson talk boxing fans have almost overlooked the fact that the American A. C. has a star show on for to-night.

The program that the Keaney Square organization has arranged is all to the good and the members no doubt will be on hand in large numbers to see the sport.

The bouts strike among the best ever staged by the club and that is saying a great deal. Here they are: Max Kramer vs. Young Brewster in the 105 pound class, Joe White of South Boston vs. Young Jasper of the North End in the 120 pound class, Steve Kennedy of Lawrence vs. Alf Lynch of Quebec in the 118 pound class, and Jig Stone vs. Dutch Carr in the final event. The main bout has been extended two extra rounds at the request of both men. The two additional rounds in the Stone-Carr bout should go a great way towards settling the long standing question of superiority between the two Charlestown wallopers.

STRAIGHT TIPS FOR SPORT FANS

THIS Gillett person is sure a wonder in the double-cross game. I don't give two hoots whether the Jeffries-Johnson unpleasantness is settled in 'Frisco or elsewhere or at all. But the esteemed Governor of California ought at least to play his game square and above board. Only a few days ago he was accusing the fight people of a "frame-up," but it strikes me the biggest "frame-up" was engineered by the Governor of California. He knew the facts four months ago and said repeatedly that the fight would not be interferred with. Now at the elevent hour, he gets into the arena and prevents it. He might have played square, at least, with the thousands of benighted fight fans who have spent their good money to go to his flourishing Commonwealth on his personal assurance that they would get some sort of a run for their money.

THE usual crop of rumors that follow anything that happens or doesn't happen in the prize ring is floating over the wires to-day. Here is one that's about as good as any. Jeffries has found that he can't get into condition to trim the negro. So his friends tipped the Governor and the Governor ate his words and ordered the fight prevented. Do you get it? Certainly would show the Governor a warm-hearted gent toward a native son, wouldn't it?

Straight Tips: A says Johnson was knocked flat by Ketchel in their last fight. B says that Johnson fell upon one knee only. Who wins

It was a clean knock down.

Straight Tips: Please tell me if William Pierce is the match-maker of the Armory A. and if he wears glasses or not.
ANGLEOWITZ.

He is the matchmaker. He wears glasses at times.

Straight Tips: A bets that amber comes from a bug. B bets that amber does not. Where does amber come from and who wins?
W. H. HENDERSON.

B wins. Amber is fossilized gum of a tree.

Straight Tips: Will you please inform me through your most valuable column if Harrison Fisher is related to "Bud" Fisher, the artist who draws Mutt and Jeff in the Boston American. The reason I ask is because their signatures look so much alike.
CONSTANT READER.

No.

Straight Tips: Will you kindly decide a bet on last Thursday's game between the Red Sox and the White Sox? A and B bought a 7 o'clock edition of the American at 5.30 P. M., and the score was 1 to 0 in favor of the White Sox in the third inning. A bet B that the White Sox would win and The White Sox did win but B refuses to pay off. He claims A knew the final score when A made the bet. Could A have known the final result of the game at 5.50 P. M.? Thanking you in advance for your decision.
B. M. KAUSTEIN.

A wins the bet. He couldn't have known the result at 5.50. B showed himself to be a poor sport, anyway, whether A knew or not.

Straight Tips: Did Mike Glover of South Boston ever fight Leach Cross or Tommy Murphy? If so please state the result and the rounds.
JOE GARY.
South Boston.

Leach Cross beat Glover in four rounds in New York. Glover's name does not appear on Tommy Murphy's record.

Straight Tips: Please state in your column when and where the last Ketchel and Johnson fight came off and how many rounds.
READER.

They fought at Colma, California and the bout lasted 12 rounds.

Straight Tips: I would greatly appreciate your opinion on the following in order to settle a bet. The cards have been dealt to six in a game of poker. All pick up their cards and look at them. One man has six cards. A bets it is a misdeal and the cards must be re-dealt. B bets the six card hand is dead only. Thanking you in advance, I I remain,
F. J. M.

B wins.

Straight Tips: Will you kindly state in your column to decide a bet how the Peter Jackson-Corbett fight came out? How many rounds and purse?
J. M. M.

Corbett and Jackson fought sixty-one rounds and the referee declared the bout no contest. The purse was $5,000, which they split.

Straight Tips: A bets that Cy Young lives in Paoli, Ohio. B bets he lives in Providence, R. I.
GEO. S. DEW, New Eng. Tel. & Tel. Co.

A wins.

Straight Tips: Kindly inform me through your columns whether Jake Stahl, now playing first base for Boston Americans, ever played in the capacity of a catcher for the same team.
HENRY WALTERS.

Stahl came to the Boston Americans as a catcher and was signed up as a backstop. He became a first sacker after leaving Boston.

LIMITS TACKLE WIDE AWAKES

Somerville will have a celebration on June 17 as well as Charlestown, and it will take place at Broadway Field at 9:45 a. m. The Limits (married) will clash with the Wide Awakes (single) in the third game in as many years, and both teams have a victory to their credit.

The game will be played for the J. Frank Mixer cup, the donor desiring to foster the spirit of baseball among amateurs, offers a silver cup to be played for by the Limits and the Wide Awakes, the cup to remain in the possession of the winning team as long as they can defend it.

On account of the extra importance attached to the rubber game the management has arranged several other features to keep the fans busy. The Cambridge City Band will give a concert from 9 till the umpire says the word. A balloon ascension and flag raising will be the other features. Following is the batting order of the two teams:

Limits—Eaton, l.f.; Page, 3b; Avondoglio, s.s.; Howard, Duncan, c.; Parker, Turner, c.f.; Raynes, 2b; Mills, 1b; F. Hamilton, r.f.; G. Hamilton, p.

Wide Awakes—Wilson, s.s.; Tellier, l.f.; Arkerson, 1b; Myers, 3b; Mulliken, c.f.; Richardson, p.; McKeown, 2b; Littlefield, c.; Allison, Vincent, r.f.

KEANEY, CAMBRIDGE BOY, BATES CAPTAIN

LEWISTON, Me., June 16.—Frank W. Keaney of Cambridge, Mass., was unanimously chosen captain of the Bates College baseball team for 1911.

Keaney is one of the most popular men ever connected with baseball at Bates. For three years he has been shortstop on the team, and is a fast fielder, a hard hitter and the best base runner on Maine college nines.

HOLY CROSS PITCHER SIGNED BY PIRATES

WORCESTER, June 16.—Jim Dowd, the Holy Cross pitcher, has signed to play with Pittsburg. Dowd graduates Thursday and will report Friday to the team. Dowd hails from Holyoke, is a right-hander, but had trouble with his arm this Spring. He has recovered from the trouble he says.

Harvard Athletic News

By W. E. BURTON

Delayed games seem to be a hoodoo for the Crimson. Here's hoping that the contests with the Elis will not run into any cloudburst.

It remains to be seen whether McLaughlin will retain the billet to twirl against Yale after the Fordhamites found him for ten hits. McLaughlin hasn't much ability to fan willow wielders; neither does he pass many batters. His chief cinch on fame is his generally reliable talent of making the stick artists dump into infield or send up easy pops. The Fordham game went a long way to cast doubts on this reputation.

Young may have a feather wing, but there are times when it fails to work well, viz., in the Fordham game. Young registered three errors out of Harvard's six in that sad awakening. Two of Young's errors were responsible for two of the visitors' tallies. In the first inning, on a passed ball by Young S. McCarthy, he went around to third, whence a double by J. McCarthy scored him. In the same inning Young's wild throw to Lanigan gave J. McCarthy his opportunity, and he ambled across the platter.

Walter Nickalls, the English rowing expert, writing in the current Colliers', thinks that Harvard's defeat in the race with the Englishmen in the Summer of 1907 was due to the Crimson's too short forward body swing. Nichalls is also a firm believer in the rowing pins used still by the English crews and disapproves the swivel locks in use in all the American colleges. Nichalls's theory is that the exaggerated body swing of the English crews brings out all the reserve strength in the men, whereas the normal body swing of the American crews does not call forth all the surplus energy that could be utilized. In view of Harvard's experience with Cornell, who used a short, jerky stroke to win, there seems to be considerable force in this argument.

Hicks was not up to his usual form in the Fordham game. Generally the clever twirler plays an errorless game on the initial sack, but in the Fordham game Hicks was guilty of a bad miss when he muffed Marshall's fine throw to first in the second.

There is a persistent rumor, which seems to be groundless, but which is circulating among the Crimson fans for more than it is worth, to the effect that Joe Kennedy, the initial sacker of the Harvard second team, will be used on first in the first Yale game and that Hicks will be sent to the outfield.

Chase, from the second team, who held down right garden in the Fordham game, gave considerable promise of making a hitter of varsity calibre. He secured one of Harvard's four hits and succeeded in locating the leather three times, only fanning once.

Unless Bacon recovers quickly from his illness, Coach Wray will have to do some more juggling stunts with the Crimson shell down at Red Top.

OLD HARVARD STAR SOMERVILLE COACH

Bob White, the former Harvard foot ball star, has been elected coach of the Somerville High School team for the season of 1910. Allie Dickinson, who looked after the interests of the team last Fall, was elected coach some time ago, but handed his resignation to the athletic association and White was chosen in his place.

White played on the last team that defeated Yale, the one that made Ver Wiebe and Kennard famous.

FUNNY ABOUT SUITS

"How they have the nerve to call this array of clothes a SUIT is away beyond me," is the way a stranger expressed himself at our shop yesterday.

He was wearing a ready-made rig and had a deep scowl on his face.

"The answer is," he continued, "that it doesn't SUIT at all. I now want a SUIT that will SUIT."

And he picked out the goods and was measured for a 3-button sack suit that will suit him from the time he puts it on until he discards it.

Your turn is next. We will build you as fine a suit as intelligent tailoring can suggest. Old "Doc" Cupid, the Great Physician

HE OFTEN CURES WHERE ALL OTHERS FAIL

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

By Nell Brinkley

The ailments affecting the ladies—especially the younger ones—diagnosed as strange incurable diseases by the ordinary practitioners and oftentimes given up by them, are easily treated by Doctor Cupid. In most cases his mere presence is potent enough to effect a cure that proves speedy and permanent. The regular physician might take a leaf from Cupid's book when treating the gentler sex and look for the real cause when he is called in to treat an ailment that is simple and yet perplexing

Six Bad Husbands and Six Unhappy Wives

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

AN "IDEAL" MARRIAGE

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

THE third bad husband fell violently in love with a very handsome girl, and he was like a man in a fever until he gained her consent to be his wife.

He had been an only son of his mother, and the girl was an only daughter of typical, doting American parents.

She was a belle in a small way; admired in her circle for her beauty and her dancing and her music, and generally considered an amiable and virtuous young woman, who would be a prize worth the winning of any man.

The young man was equally popular, and his success in the business world, together with his education and social standing, made him seem a very suitable husband for the pretty belle. The husband was popular in his club, and he was proud of his athletic prowess and his good fellowship with manly men.

When his fiancee asked him to bring her a chair or a fan or to get her shawl and kept him busy waiting on her he laughed with delight at the novel tasks assigned him and felt that he was a royal courtier in the Kingdom of Beauty.

The engagement was a brief one, and the wedding was a brilliant affair.

Looked Like an Ideal Union

Everybody declared that it was an ideal union, and all the outlook was toward perfect happiness.

They did not possess wealth; only a simple competence, which enabled them to begin housekeeping with one maid. The maid did not stay long, and the first cloud on the happiness of the home was in the difficulty found in keeping any maid more than a few months.

Soon after the honeymoon, the young husband realized that his position of courtier in the Kingdom of Beauty was growing rather difficult.

He was obliged to go to his office at nine o'clock in the morning, but the frequent intervals between the departure of one maid and the arrival of another made a similar frequency of a breakfast at the club or restaurant and, before his departure from the house, he was often requested to "be a darling and bring his own lovey dovey a glass of milk and a bit of fruit."

Knowing that he had taken his "lovey dovey" from a home where she always breakfasted in bed, the devoted husband felt it his duty to make life as pleasant as possible for her; yet the position of butler and maid combined was not pleasing to his manly spirit. Still he liked to be obliging and he continued to do her bidding.

Between the basement kitchen and the sleeping room of the young couple two flights of stairs intervened, and it seemed never to occur to the mistress of the household that it was a hardship for any one save herself to go up and down these stairs a dozen times in a brief space of time on errands for her comfort.

Made Every One a Slave

Maids were called to the top floor on trivial errands, while they were engaged in their duties down in the basement, and they were sent to the corner box to mail letters or to the grocery store, or the chemist's, on errands a half dozen times a day.

When they could not go, or when they were not there, "darling husband" was commissioned to be errand boy. He was seldom enabled to finish his cigar or read his paper in the evening without being asked to go up or down stairs, and to bring a chair or a shawl or a book or a box of bonbons for his wife's pleasure, or to run to the corner to get her something she needed.

And he became skilled in the work of a lady's maid in the continual demand made upon him to assist his wife in fastening her gowns.

After three years the situation in which the young man found himself began to prey upon his mind. For it grew worse instead of better.

"I am no longer a manly man," he said to himself. "I am not the head of a house; I am an employe of a pretty woman. I am a combination of lackey, valet, butler, head waiter and maid of all work. I haven't even a half day or an evening off; not a regular weekly time I can call my own, as most domestics have—I am going to strike."

But when he made his first protest his wife became hysterical and sent for her mother.

She Called Him a Brute

The mother said the husband was a brute to refuse to bring up the breakfast tray to a poor delicate woman, who had an inefficient and inconsiderate servant. Any man with half a heart, she said, would have shown sympathy and kindness in such a situation. One word led to another, until a very unpleasant condition of things existed in the household.

He told the mother-in-law that it was her daughter's fault that she could never keep a servant; that servants would leave when they were imposed upon and overworked, and that it might, in time, be possible for a husband to leave unless greater consideration was shown in the small matters of daily life.

He said there was no pleasure to be had in a house with a woman who made every human being under the roof a slave to her caprices, and who was so utterly selfish that she could not understand how any one might object to being ordered about on errands night and day.

Then Came a Separation

This scene was only the beginning of perpetual scenes. The husband began to stay out evenings. He often remained away at dinner, and the neglected wife wept upon her mother's sympathetic bosom.

And in due course of time a separation and divorce occurred. Looking back over her married life, the wife was unable to see wherein she had failed. And everybody said she was such a beautiful woman; so faithful; so amiable; so accomplished, and so evidently fond of her husband.

But everybody had not lived under the same roof with her.

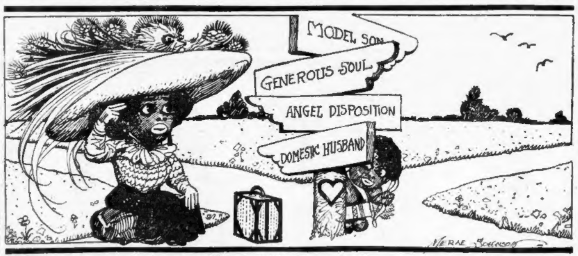
Mirandy on Selecting a Life Mate

By DOROTHY DIX

"DE odder night," said Mirandy, "Ma'y Jane was a-readin' to me in de paper where dat actor man, Mr. Nat Goodwin's maw say dat she don't know why in de name of goodness dat he has so much trouble wid his wives, because he sho'ly am a good son. She suttenly does give him a good name, dat he's affectionate, an' kind, an' generous, an' dat hit looks lak to her dat such a model son ought to make a husband dat'll please even a actor lady, what, dey tells me, hits mighty hard for anybody to hold down a steady job wid in de husband line.



"Dare's plenty of signs to pint out de kind of a husband a man is gwine to make, but dere ain't none of 'em safe to go by."

"'Dat is funny,' says Ma'y Jane, what ain't had no 'sperience in de matermonial line yit, 'for hit looks lak a good son ought to make a good husband.'

"'Not at all,' 'spons I, 'far from hit. Becaze a man is a good son ain't no more sign dat he'll make a good husband dan hit is dat becaze cheese is good in a sandwich hit will be in a puddin'. Don't you go an' marry any man jest becaze he's got a recommend as a good son, onless you wants to land in de divorsh court.'

His Mother's Biscuits

"'How's dat?' axes Ma'y Jane.

"'Well,' 'spons I, 'I ain't atalkin about dis heah Mr. Goodwin who, from what I hears, is got de marryin' habit an' can't break hisself of hit, but when you hears an ordinary fellow spoke of as de pattern son an' brother, you jest shy off from him, becaze ef you marries him you will find out dat he'll make one of dese heah kind of husbands dat thinks dat his wife ought to play second fiddle to his mother as long as she lives, an' what will throw his mother's biscuit in his wife's face every time he sets down to de table; an' ev'ry time his wife dast to ask him for a quarter he'll tell her how many years his mother wore her black silk dress, an' dat she was a miracle wukker what fed her fambly on de fat of de land widout ever havin' to spend no money on de butcher or de grocer.

"'Hit's a noble thing,' says I, 'for a man to be a model son, an' I hopes to goodness dat I'se raisin' up my boy, Thomas Jefferson Ab'ram Lincoln, to be one, but bein as how you is my daughter I wants to perfect you from gittin' some other mother's darling if I can.'

"'But, Maw,' says Ma'y Jane, 'ain't dere no signs dat pints out de kind of a husband dat a man is gwine to make?'

Worse Than Tips on Weather

"'Dare's plenty of signs,' 'spons I, 'but dere ain't none of dem dat hit's safe to go by. Dey is lak dese heah wedder predictions. Sometimes dey hits, an' agin dey don't, an' you never can tell befo' hand which way things is gwine to turn out.

"'Suppose you want one of dese heah domestic husbands dat's always a purrin' around de hearth of a evenin', lak de fambly cat, an' you looks around for a fellow what's got de earmarks of domesticity about him, an' you says:

"'"Mah goodness, if Jake ain't hit, den I don't know one of dese heah homekeepin' husbands when I sees him!"

"'An' den you marries him an' you finds out dat dat was a false sign, an' dat de man dat you most had to sweep out of yo' house wid de broom to git rid of him befo' marriage, you can't hold in de house wid a lock an' chain after marriage.

A Yale Lock on the Purse

"'An' maybe you thinks dat you'd lak to marry a man what's generous, an' what won't dole out de chicken feed to you lak he was partin' wid his last eye tooth ev'y time dat he gives you a nickel, an' so you listens wid you' year to de ground, an' you hears ev'ybody a-singin' de praises of Sam for bein' so liberal, an' sayin' dat he sho'ly has got de open hand.

"'So you marry Sam, an' lo an' behold, you finds out dat he is one of dese men dat will fling his money down on de bar an' set 'em up for de crowd, an' den lambast his wife becaze she done buy herself a forty-nine-cent shirtwaist, an' dat whilst he is de fust to put his name down on de subscription list to buy a gold watch an' chain for de policeman, he lets his wife take in washin' to buy de po'k chops for de fambly. Hit ain't no sign, my child, dat a man ain't gwine to have a Yale lock on his pocketbook at home becaze he carries hit wide open in public.

"'Or maybe you's sort of set yo' heart on marryin' one of dese heah peaceable men, what would be easy to git along wid, an' what will make matermony a glad sweet song, as de poet says, instead of de battleground dat de fambly circle mostly is. So you casts yo' eye around for a man dat looks real easy an' dat appears lak you could wrop around yo' finger widout strainin' yo' constitution any in de doin' of hit, an' yo' eye lights on Jim, an' you hears folks a-singin' his praises wharever you goes.

Must Marry to Find Out.

"'"Me for dat angel disposition," you says, an' you goes out an' grabs him an' drags him to de altar, a-thinkin' dat you suttingly has got de prize package.

"'But what happens? Lakly as not, dat man is done used up so much amiability bein' pleasant an' perlite to strangers dat he ain't got none left for home consumption. Some of de most cantankerous men dat I ever seed in dere own houses was dat mild away from home dat butter wouldn't have melted in dere moufs. Becaze a man is popular away from home ain't no sign dat he's gwine to make de sort of a man dat is popular wid his own wife.'

"'But, Maw,' says Ma'ry Jane, 'how is anybody gwine to tell, den, what sort of a husband a man is gwine to turn out?'

"'Dere ain't no way to tell,' says I. 'You'se got to marry him to find out. An' den hit's too late for yo' knowledge to do you any good.'"

Candies

MAPLE PECAN CANDY

Two cupfuls of sugar, one cup of cream or milk, butter as large as a walnut. Cook until it begins to boil, add one-quarter of a cup of maple syrup. Cook ten minutes. Remove from stove and add one-half a cupful of pecans. Beat until almost cold, then make into patties and put them on a buttered tin.

UNCOOKED CANDIES

Many candies made by confectioners are made without boiling, which makes them desirable and they are equal to the "French creams." The secret lies in the sugar used, which is confectioners' sugar.

Around the radiant bride,

The dainty bridesmaids, and
The flower girls,
Fair as their flowers are,
And pure as pearls.
The handsome best man and
The minister;
And all eyes there and all
Thoughts fixed on her.
And kith and kin and all
Seeking to press
Her lips and hands with many
A fond caress.
And there, beside the bride,
In black and white,
A man, seemingly in
A lonely plight.
Who is the cheerful chunk
Of well-groomed gloom?
Why, he's just been eclipsed.
He is the groom!

How Hen Binney Cured His Wife of Talking Foolish

By KENNETT HARRIS

"IF a man's foresight was ha'f as good as his hine sight, he'd be all right," remarked Sol Baker. "If I'd known some things twenty years back that I know now I'd have done a heap different."

"Mabbe you would, an' mabbe you wouldn't," said Washington Hancock. "Then again, you might have done different, an' come out a heap worse. It might he'p some buyin' real estate, but you take it as a gin'ral rule the chances a feller misses ain't never as big as he thinks they were lookin' back at 'em. They're like Henry Binney's wife's beaux.

"Co'se she didn't have no beaux after she married Henry Binney. She didn't have so doggone many when Henry came struttin' around either. She was sort o' struttin' around either. Henry didn't have to ask her more'n a dozen times before she took him; if he had to that many.

"Henry was a mite bowlegged an' runty, and the hair on his haid was thicker below his ears than it was above 'em, but they counted him as a male in the census, an' real clever dispositioned, so 'Melia concluded there wasn't no use foolin' away time waitin' for somethin' better.

Thought She'd Made a Mistake

"It wasn't but a little while after she was married, though, when she seen what a mistake she'd made taking a poor stock like Hen Binney. For one thing, she had to work mighty nigh as hard as she ever did, and Hen hadn't got no patent barrel churn for her like her pappy had. She had sort of counted on a new buggy, too, but Hen allowed that all the old one needed was a coat of paint an' a couple o' spokes in the near front wheel to make it good as it ever was.

"'If I'd married Bart Case, he'd have given me all the new buggies I wanted an' a surrey to boot,' says 'Melia.

"'So'd I if I could, 'Melia,' says Henry, in the meek way he had. 'The trouble is that I can't.'

"'I could have had a hired girl to he'p me with the everlastin' work if I hadn't sent Bill Gibson to the right-about,' says 'Melia.

"'I hain't got no doubt of it, 'Melia,' says Hen. 'It certain'y is too bad that I can't afford one for you right now.'

"'Preston Shoop useter say that I wouldn't never have to ask him for a silk dress or a new hat, or anythin' like that if I'd only take him,' says 'Melia.

"'Well, you don't never have to ask me, 'Melia,' says Henry.

"'It hain't no joke,' said 'Melia.

"'It's gettin' so it hain't, 'Melia,' says Henry.

"Then, after awhile, she goes to findin' fault with him an' the color of his whiskers, an' the way he humped over, when he walked, and the room he took up with his elbers when he sat down to table an' so on.

"'Rodney Walker shaved himself reg'lar every other mornin' when he was co'tin' me,' she says.

"'I spose he didn't cut hisse'f when he shaved,' says Henry. 'I most always do,' says he.

"A Powerful Neat Dresser"

"'Charley Graham was a powerful neat an' tasty dresser,' says 'Melia. 'I often wonder why 'twas that I couldn't be satisfied with Charley. He had elegant brown eyes, Charley had, an' the pertiest manners I ever seen, an' he was real smart. He felt dretful bad when I tole him "No."'

"'He nachally would,' says Henry. 'Lookin' back, I reckon I'd have felt dretful bad, if you'd said "no" to me, 'Melia. Cross my heart, I b'lieve I would have.'

"'You don't need to be insultin' about it,' says 'Melia.

"Well, they went on that way, for ten years, and, fin'ly, one day, Henry he says to her, ''Melia, who do you reckon you'd the soonest tak' of them old beaux of yourn, if you had to do it again?'

"'I reckon I'd have done better to have took most any one of 'em,' says 'Melia, 'but Tracy Jenks is the one I ought to have took. Tracey was right well fixed, an' he was big an' strong an' handsome an' partickler about the way he looked, an' free-hearted an' knew a right smart of po'try an'——'

"'That's enough, 'Melia,' says Henry, with a sigh. 'Your new buggy's in the shed. Jim an' me uncrated it this mornin', an' you an' me agoin' to hitch Salim an' Bright to it to-morrow, an go for a jaunt. 'Lisbeth Ann kin tend to the work.'

"So the next mornin' they started off, in the slickest turn-out that ever came into Nodaway County, an' Hen himse'f was dressed to kill in his Sunday-go-meetin', an' she was rigged out in her black gros-grain silk, an' green kid gloves, an' hat, with the pineys all around it, 'at she'd got in St. Joe—all mighty fine.

How Hen Cured 'Melia

"Presently she says, 'Where are we all agoin', Henry?'

"'We're agoin' to pay Tracy Jenks a visit,' says Hen, touching up the nigh horse. 'We'll get there about sundown an' we'll stay all night, if they ask us.'

"Well, they got there long afore sundown, an' they wasn't ast to stay all night, so after supper they lit out again.

"'My land sakes,' says Melia, when they'd started. 'I'd never have believed that was Tracy Jenks in the world! An' his wife! An' them poor young ones! Did you ever! But you hain't agoin' right, Hen,' she says, ketchin' his arm. 'This ain't the road home.'

"'I know it,' says Hen: 'It's the road to Bill Gibson's. That's where we're agoin'. An' after we've seen Bill Gibson we're agoin' to Bert Case's, and from there to Preston Shoop's an' Charley Graham's and we'll finish up with Rodney Walker's. Mabbe by watchin' 'em, I kin' get some p'ints on how to please you, 'Melia.'

"'Hen,' says 'Melia, 'turn right aroun' an' drive home, if you don't get there till mornin'. I don't want to see more o' the others. An' Hen,' says she, 'I reckon there ain't no one c'd please me, ha'f as well as you do—get right down to it—an' from this time, I'll let up on talkin' foolish,' says she."

"That's about as much as any of 'em can do," commented Old Man Somarindyk.

To Remove Dust From the Hair

(From the New York Examiner)

"Don't drench your head with water every time your hair is dusty," says Claribel Montague, the beauty expert. "Too much moisture causes the hair to become dead and dull.

"When you want a perfect coiffure, just take a quick dry shampoo. Mix 4 ounces of therox with 4 ounces of orris root and you will have a supply of dry shampoo powder sufficient for all summer.

"Sift the powder lightly and evenly through the hair. Brush it out thoroughly—and it takes with it every particle of dust and dirt. Therox immediately gives the hair a rich and glossy lustre. This mixture vitalizes the follicles, and (if used regularly) long and abundant hair will be the result."

Air Navies Mean Peace, Says Maxim

The aerial navy will be a deadly factor in warfare of the future, according to Hudson Maxim, the inventor of high-power explosives and destructive projectiles.

The wonderful flight by Charles K. Hamilton between New York and Philadelphia makes the prophecies of Mr. Maxim all the more credible.

Mr. Maxim says that within 100 years battles will be fought in the air, as well as on land and sea. We must have an army of aviators, as well as of infantry, cavalry fighters and naval men.

A battleship costs from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000. An aeroplane for sky-raiding over the enemy's forces can be built for $1,000 to $1,300. Consequently 10,000 aeroplane fighters can be equipped for the price of one Dreadnaught.

With carnage in the air, as well as on the earth and sea, war will eventually die out of its own intolerable horrors. In an absorbing interview on aeroplane war the inventor says:

By HUDSON MAXIM.

Aerial navigation has just begun, and the future offers greater opportunities to the inventor in aviation than in any other branch of human effort to-day. The conquest of the air is now an actuality, but we are far from having acquired the science of practical flight. There is much yet to be done.

There are three broad spheres of usefulness for aviation—commercial travel, sport and war. I predict that in the near future—probably within half a decade—aviators will be traveling from city to country estate, back and forth, not as sport, but as a matter of safe, practical convenience.

The flying machine will be a great time-saver. There will be no bad-roads problem on the great sky-way, there will be no laws against scorching; the constabulary and police hold-up man of the little borough that needs your money cannot harass the automobilist of the air.

There will be lines of alighting areas, radiating from all large cities and connecting all great centres of population, which will be near enough together to enable the aviator when flying at a moderate height to glide, without power, to a safe landing at any moment his engine may go wrong.

Dangers Will be Lessened.

Although aviation will forever have its dangers, still the hazard will continually be lessened. The aerial automobilist will escape many of the hazards which are inseparable from traveling over the highways.

Invention will soon render the flying machine practically stable in moderate weather, and when the wind blows hard or a storm is approaching there will be provided the alighting areas I have mentioned, which will prove ever-present havens of safety.

The flying machine, more than any other war engine, requisitions science, and it concerns us, and should concern us deeply, as to what its place will be in future warfare. The wonderful feats of the Wright brothers, of Farman, of Paulhan, Bleriot, De Lesseps and Curtiss have demonstrated that in the next great war the flying machine is going to play a very active part.

Heretofore warfare has been the conduct of a sort of series of siege operations. Frontiers have been forced back, positions gained, and the beaten army has taken up and fortified new positions. The capture or loss of a position, or the choice of an advantageous or disadvantageous position has meant victory or defeat.

Can Laugh at Fortifications.

The flying machine carries all positions, for it overleaps them all. The aviator can laugh at coast fortifications and the coast line belted with armorclads. The flying machine places the whole country at once upon the firing line. This is a new and strange condition of affairs.

When this country is again drawn into the swirling vortex of war, a contingency at any time possible and some time inevitable, we shall be forced to realize that we are where the war is, for the enemy may at any time come down out of the sky with fire and sword and the flare of the torch, and the glint of steel may wake the slumber of any midnight.

What is the remedy? The answer is that just as fire must be fought with fire, so must the flying machine be fought with the flying machine. We must have our aerial navies of the latest, most efficient and up-to-date patterns. We must have our trained and experienced veteran aviators.

In the next great war, not only around our entire national frontiers must we have flying machines perched ready for flight, but the inland mountain height must be equally fortified and equipped. Hereafter, in spite of every precaution, aerial raiders are sure to break in upon and ravage unprotected country, blowing up magazines, destroying railroads and railroad bridges and levying upon moneyed institutions.

Fortune for Some Inventor.

There is a wide and fruitful field awaiting the inventor for improvements in weapons for offence and defence in aerial warfare. The new conditions will require new guns and new projectiles, new instruments for observation and for making quick and accurate measurements of underlying areas, new photographic apparatus.

Instruments will be wanted for determining the altitude and actual speed of travel of a flying machine, upon which it is carried, in order that, in rapid flight, explosive missiles, and particularly missiles containing inflammable materials, may be dropped at the right instant to strike desired points underneath.

Allowance must be made for the forward travel of the projectile with the machine.

A projectile dropped from an aeroplane traveling thirty miles an hour will travel forward forty feet the first second, while its drop will be but sixteen feet; and forty feet the next second, while its drop will be but thirty-two feet, and so on.

I do not believe, as I have previously pointed out, that very great destruction is to be expected from the explosion of high-explosive bombs dropped from the air. The action of a high-explosive bomb is too local to be very effective against troops, and the damage such bombs would do to the buildings of large cities would be relatively small.

The same is true with respect to their use against coast fortifications and warships. But such projectiles may be used with better effect upon the baggage trains of armies, upon storehouses and magazines; while, of course, large explosive bombs dropped into the smokestacks of warships might prove very destructive.

Question of Marksmanship.

It must be borne in mind that when attacking troops from overhead the individual soldier presents a much smaller target by being taken endwise than he does to horizontal line fire, which takes him sidewise. Furthermore, a projectile with a flat trajectory might pass through several men, while a projectile dropped from the air could strike but one man, and the chances of hitting that one man would be many times less than they would be if hurled at him from an ordinary shoulder rifle or field gun.

Aeroplanes have already been built capable of carrying several persons. This has amply demonstrated the feasibility of transporting large bodies of men with light arms and explosive materials for raiding an enemy's country. With constant improvements in manufacture the cost of the aeroplane will be continuously reduced for a long time to come. Aeroplanes suited to the raider will probably be produced from a thousand to fifteen hundred dollars each. Consequently 10,000 of them could be built for the cost of a single battleship, which now is from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000.

Even 1,000 of them attacking a battleship at once might succeed in dropping sufficient explosives down the smokestacks to destroy her, and could this be done, even with the loss of every aircraft employed in the engagement, the victory would be a great one. But smokestacks will then be provided with grilled or screened openings, on which aerial bombs will be exploded, and thereby prevented from passing down them.

In future wars, however, we must count on pitting flying machine against flying machine, aviator against aviator, and lines of battle will sweep the sky in every direction over the contending host engaged below, while the sky of the whole country will require constant aerial policing. Aerial scouts will constantly cruise the heavens in all directions.

THE ISLAND OF MYSTERY

LESS than three thousand miles from the city of New York, and about a third of that distance from San Francisco, there is situated in the upper reaches of the Gulf of California, a small island, worthless even for so mean a purpose as the raising of goats, but nevertheless a centre of attraction for the ethnologists and archaeologists of the Old and New Worlds for many generations.

This rocky peak, rising from the quiet waters of the gulf, is known as Tiburon Island. Tiburon is a Spanish word, which translated into English means "shark." The waters around the island are literally swarming with these tigers of the sea, and the inhabitants of the island are said to be no less ferocious than these sharks. Tiburon is peopled with a handful of Indians, the only aborigines of their kind in the world, known as Seris. They are reputed to be canibals, to be so fierce that none of the mainland tribes of Mexican redskins ever dare invade their shores, and to possess the secret of manufacture of a peculiarly deadly poison, with which they prepare their arrows before battle.

Society Struggles with the Hobble Skirt at the Country Club Races

Start of the Second race at Country Club, showing Robert G., the winner, leading with King of Bashan, Renault, Karagola, Ferocious, Profusion, Hyida, Mass. II., Paddy and Silver Ball following.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Shades of our straight-laced Puritan ancestry! Hobble skirts in Boston. Who would ever imagine that we'd come to that.

Think of a trim, prim Boston dame in a hobble skirt, and it is to laugh—for of all the creations ever conceived in the human brain it's the ugliest and I'm sure that the forefathers of our bluest of blue-blooded Boston maids and matrons would turn in their graves could they but catch a glimpse of their offspring toddling about in a skirt with a hem just wide enough to allow the wearer to take a step about one-sixteenth the length of the usual one. Imagine the girls who have cultivated an athletic and mannish stride being compelled to mince as though their feet were tied together, forgetting their limitations amid the excitement of the races and falling all over themselves in their wild endeavor to get from one side of the track to the other in a hurry.

Hobble skirts and Hindu bonnets—a combination undoubtedly trying to the wearer and assuredly ludicrous to the spectator.

One of the most conspicuous of the a la mode figures seen at the races yesterday was the winsome brown-eyed Mrs. A. Robeson, who was picturesque in a hobble gown of lavender foulard, combined with cream lace and a Hindu bonnet of a deeper shade coming well down over her eyes—so far in fact that only when her head was thrown back could her eyes be seen at all.

Von Meyer Girls in Violet.

Other notable hobble figures were the two pretty Von L. Meyer girls, Julia and Alice, who were dressed alike in violet satin made with white lace and drawn in closely about the knees, and deep violet Hindu bonnets with large violet bows in front.

The independence loving Eleanora Sears refuses on such occasions to be fettered by any sort of conventionalities, and appeared in a mannish gray suit and large black hat trimmed with velvet and a couple of small clusters of roses.

A notable figure was the dainty Helen Sears, just back from Europe and wearing a striking gown of black foulard with large white hat trimmed with black ribbon velvet.

Mrs. Bryce Allan entertained a party of friends in her box on the grand stand and was looking especially well in a chiffon gown of gray and green combined and a large black plumed hat.

Mrs. A. Henry Higginson was sweet and girlish in palest lavender chiffon and a white lace hat trimmed with pink rosebuds.

Mrs. John E. Thayer in a lavender and gray chiffon gown and a gray straw hat trimmed with lavender velvet, presided over her well filled box in her usual gracious manner.

Many Bright Knots of Color.

A bright knot of color in the grand stand box tier was furnished by the chanticler chiffon gowns worn by the two pretty subbuds Elise and Olivia Ames, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Ames. Their hats were large white ones trimmed with black. One of the most enthusiastic spectators among the younger girls was vivacious Margaret Stackpole, who played such a prominent part in the last Vincent Club show and who was especially attractive in a gown of rajah silk with girdle and sash of deep crimson satin and large tan hat faced with deep crimson and trimmed with crimson flowers.

That stately young beauty, Faith Simkins, was another notable figure in the boxes and was handsomely gowned in gray chiffon trimmed with oriental chiffon done in pink roses. Her hat was a large affair of old rose trimmed with green and old rose chiffon. With her was that interesting young matron, Mrs. Charles P. Greenough, 2d, who wore dark blue satin and a tan hat trimmed with black velvet and pink roses.

1909 Debutantes Popular.

One of the handsomest of the younger girls was Miss Edith Bird, who the day previous was maid of honor at the wedding of her sister, Joan and Louis Agassiz Shaw, 2d. She wore a white lace gown with long lace coat and a white hat almost covered with pale pink plumes.

Mrs. Huntington Wolcott (Hannah Stevenson) arrived rather late with her distinguished young husband, in their automobile, and viewed the races from the parking spaces. She wore a gown of black and a tan hat trimmed with a tan aigrette.

There were two of last year's debutantes on hand, and both were surrounded the entire afternoon by a horde of young gallants. They were Miss Susannah Cunningham and Fanny Osgood. Miss Cunningham was in white serge suit and a white hat trimmed with black velvet, while Miss Osgood wore a mannish suit of dark blue serge and a blue hat to match.

Violet and Lavender Prevail.

Miss Margaret Thomas, who came over from New York with her mother for the occasion, was welcomed warmly on all sides, and was as much a belle as ever. She looked especially well in her modish suit of white serge and her large old rose hat trimmed with clusters of pink rose buds under the brim. Mrs. Thomas was distinguished in violet satin.

Miss Mary Josephine Amory was attractively gowned in deep blue chiffon and dark blue hat trimmed with white plumes.

A notable little figure was Mrs. John Parkinson, Jr., who wore a trig suit of gray and a large black hat.

Violet and lavender seemed the favorite colors, and a notably handsome all violet figure was Mrs. George von L. Meyer. Her gown was of violet chiffon and her hat of violet straw trimmed with tiny red rosebuds.

Smith College Seniors Find 20 Engaged

NORTHAMPTON, June 16.—In exchanging confidences immediately following the class dinner of the seniors of Smith College twenty of the graduates created surprise by announcing that they were engaged to be married.

"Young women going through college should bear in mind that the noblest ambition of young womanhood should be that of matrimony and motherhood," said an eloquent speaker some time ago in addressing the students of the college.

That the girls took the advice literally and that it made an impression upon them is evinced by the announcement made. The secrets were let out by the graduates, when the girls exchanged heart talks during a roll call. The surprises concerning the engagements came from unsuspected quarters. In one case a young student was astounded, for she was told that the young woman making the confession was engaged to her brother, and she had little guessed it.

The announcements came at the class dinner held in alumnae gymnasium, Miss Anne Gardner Pigeon of East Boston presiding. As each of the twenty announced their engagement she was roundly applauded.

Social Notes

The fourth annual picnic of the women's auxiliary of the Scots' Charitable Society was held yesterday at Caledonian Grove, Spring street, West Roxbury. Mrs. E. B. Traill, eighty-seven years old, and Mrs. Reuben Crooke, eighty, two of the oldest members of the society, spent the entire day at the grove. Athletic contests were held. Dancing was enjoyed in the large pavilion and dinner was served.

The quarterly meeting of the Retail Credit Men's Association was held last evening at the Hotel Bellevue, President William Ray of the Paine Furniture Company presiding. Among the concerns represented were Jordan Marsh Company, R. H. White Company, Shepard, Norwell Company, C. F. Hovey & Co., R. H. Stearns & Co., Bigelow, Kennard & Co., Thorp & Martin Co., Little, Brown & Co., Filene's, Henry Siegel Company, T. D. Whitney Company, L. P. Hollander Company, A. Shuman & Co. and Macullar Parker Company.

S. C. Dobbs of Atlanta, Ga., president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, was the guest of the Pilgrim Publicity Association at luncheon at the City Club yesterday.

The seventeenth annual banquet of the Catholic Literary Union will be held at the Waverly House, Charlestown, to-night. Previous to the banquet a reception will be held at the clubhouse, No. 5 Monument square.

The class of 1873, English High School, held its annual outing at Cohasset and Hull yesterday. The members were guests of C. W. Barron at his Summer home at Cohasset in the morning and arrived at the Boston Yacht Club house, Hull, in the afternoon, where a fish dinner was served.

A delegation representing the R. A. Chapter of the Shekinah, Chelsea, left Boston yesterday for St. John, N. B., to be guests of the Charleton Chapter for the remainder of the week. The party numbers twenty-seven prominent Chelsea Masons.

The Rev. A. Z. Conrad, pastor of the Park Street Church, will preach his 25th anniversary Sunday sermon Sunday, and at the same time bid farewell to his congregation for the Summer. Dr. Conrad will depart for Europe on Monday.

THE FORTUNE HUNTER

How a Business Failure Wins Success Through Love and Stick-to-itiveness

By JOSEPH LOUIS VANCE

Copyright, 1910, by Winchell Smith and Joseph Louis Vance.

CHAPTER IX. (Continued)

"PERHAPS you're right," Duncan conceded; "perhaps I have some other motive. But that's neither here nor there. I'm here, and it is my present intention to learn the drug business in your father's store."

"I don't believe you, Mister Duncan—or whatever your name is."

"I'm sorry," he said patiently.

Betty's lips twitched contemptuous. "Well, saying you do mean to work here"——

"I do."

"Where do you think your pay's going to come from?"

"Heaven, perhaps."

"I guess you think that's funny, don't you?"

"I confess, at the moment I did. But now I realize it's probably a bitter truth."

He was too much for her, she saw, and the knowledge only served to fan her indignation and suspicions.

"You're making a mistake," she snapped. "Father can't pay you nothing."

"He'll pay me all I'm worth," said Duncan meekly.

She glared at him an instant longer, then mute for lack of a sufficiently scornful retort, turned and ran back up the steps, slamming the door behind her.

Duncan drew a rueful face, contemplating the place where she had been.

"I didn't think this was going to be a bed of roses—and it isn't," he concluded.

CHAPTER X.

NAT had a busy day or two after that, trying to set things to rights in the store for the better reception and display of the new stock.

Sperry dropped him a line saying that the goods would arrive on the third day, and there was much to do to make way for them. He managed to get the shop cleaned up thoroughly with Betty's not unwilling but distinctly suspicious aid; the girl was apparently convinced that Duncan meant business and that this would ostensibly work for her father's benefit, but she was distinctly dubious as to the deus ex machina.

Duncan now and again would catch her watching him, her eyes dark with speculation; but when she detected his gaze, her look would change instantly to one of hostility and defiance. He suspected that only her father's wishes prevented an open break with her; as it was he was conscious that there was no more than an armed truce between them.

And he did not like it; it made him uncomfortable. He wasn't hardened enough to have an easy conscience, and Betty's open doubts as to the reason for his coming to Radville disturbed Duncan more than he would have cared to own.

For all that, they worked together steadily and accomplished a rather sensational transformation in the appearance of the place.

The floor, counter and shelves were swept, washed, dusted and garnished with paint; that is, all but the floor received the attention of the paint brush. Duncan managed to smuggle a quantity of oilcloth into the shop and get it down before Graham could enter any protest.

The effect approximated tiling nearly enough to brighten the room up wonderfully.

Aside from this, the old stock was routed out and for the greater part donated to the rubbish heap.

Teddy Smart, the glazier, was commissioned to repair the broken window panes and showcases. A can of metal polish freshened up the nickel and brass trimmings and rendered the single upright of the soda fountain almost attractive.

The stove was uprooted and stored away and its aspiring pipes dispensed with.

Finally, after considerable argument, Graham consented to the removal of his work bench to a shed in the back yard. The model was suffered to remain, the tanks and burner being stored out of sight beneath one of the window seats, more because Duncan considered it would be a good thing to have the light than because he understood or attached much importance to the contrivance.

For that matter, he hadn't time to listen to an exposition of its advantages, and Graham, recognizing this, was content to abide his time, serene in the conviction that he would presently find in his assistant a willing and sympathetic listener.

Between spasms of work Duncan had his hands full attending to the soda fountain. Soda water being practically the only salable thing in the store, it had to serve as an excuse for the inquisitiveness of many of my fellow citizens, to say nothing of—I should put it, but especially—their wives and daughters.

The consumption of vanilly sody in those two days broke all known Radville records and stands a singular tribute to the Spartan fortitude of Radville womanhood, particularly the young strata thereof.

There isn't any doubt that he had a nodding acquaintance with every pretty girl in town, as well as with most not considered pretty.

From my window in the Citizen office I was able to keep a tolerably close account of events and obtain a consensus of public opinion.

So far as the latter bore upon Duncan, it was divided into two rather distinct parties, one of course favoring him; and this was feminine almost exclusively. Tracey Tanner, to be sure, confessed within my hearing to a predilection for the Noo York dood, but was inclined to hedge and climb the fence when assailed by Roland's strictures.

Roland, I suspect, was a wee mite jealous: he had been paying attention to—I mean, going with—Josie Lockwood for several months. Instinctively he must have divined his danger; and it's not in reason to exact admiration of the usurper from the usurped, even when the act of usurpation has not yet been definitely consummated.

Roland went to the length of labelling Duncan "sissy," and professed to believe that Hiram Nutt was justified in calling him a "s'picious character;" Roland hinted darkly that Duncan knew New York no better than Will Bigelow.

"And if he did come from there," he asseverated, "I betcher he didn't leave for no good purpose."

His temper inspired me with the sapient reflection that it's a terrible thing to be in love, even if only with an old man's millions.

"There's goin' to be a real Noo Yorker here before long," Roland boasted; "he's comin' to see me on some 'special private bus'ness of ours."

"Huh," commented Tracey, the skeptical. "What kind of a Noo Yorker 'd come all the way here to see you?"

"That's all right. You'll see when he gets here. He's a pro-motor."

"A what?"

"A pro-motor, a financier," Roland pronounced it "finnan seer," thus betraying symptoms of culture and bewildering Tracey beyond expresion.

"What's that?" he demanded aggressively.

"That's a feller 't can take nothing at all and incorporate it and make money out of it," Roland defined with some hesitancy.

"And that's why he's coming down here to take a look at you?" inquired Tracey, skipping nimbly round the corner.

Curiously enough in my understanding (for I own to no great faith in Roland's statements, taking them by and large) his friend from New York put in an unheralded appearance in Radville that same night, on the evening train.

The Bigelow House received him to its figurative bosom under the name of W. H. Burnham. He sent for Roland promptly and treated him to a dinner at the hotel; something which I have always regarded as a punishment several sizes too large for the crime.

Later, having displayed him on the streets in witness to his good faith, Roland spent the evening with Mr. Burnham mysteriously confabulating behind closed doors in the hotel. Speculation ran rife through the town until 9 o'clock, and Roland for several days basked in the heat of public interest.

I happened accidentally to get a glimpse of Mr. Burnham after supper, although I had to miss my baked apple in order to get down town in time. He was a disappointment to some extent, although his mode of dress attracted much comment as being far more sprightly than Duncan's and less startling than Roland's.

He has a self-confident air and a bit of swagger that filled the eye, but a face and a voice that detracted, the one too boldly good-looking, with eyes roving and predaceous, the other a suggestion too loud and domineering. * * * I fear association with Duncan had vitiated my taste.

However that may be, Roland got an hour off at the bank the following morning, and the pair of them, after wandering with evident aimlessness around the town, drifted as it were on the tide of hap-chance into Graham's drug store.

Duncan was at the station, superintending the transportation of the new stock, which had come by the early local; Betty was busy with her housework upstairs; and only Sam kept the shop.

Sam wasn't in the best of spirits. His evergreen optimism seldom withered, but in spite of all that had already been accomplished in behalf of the store, in spite of the rosier aspect of his declining fortunes and his confidence in the affection for Duncan, Sam was worried.

He had been over to the bank once, even at that early hour, but Blinky Lockwood had driven out of town to see about foreclosing one of his numerous mortgages in the neighborhood, and his note, which fell due at the bank that day, was still a weight upon Sam's mind.

Roland and Burnham found him wandering nervously round the store, alternately taking his hat down from the peg, as if minded to make a second trip to the bank, and replacing it as he realized that patience was his part. He looked older and more worn than ordinarily, and seemed distinctly pleased to be distracted by his callers.

"Why, hello, Roland!" he cried cheerfully, hanging up his hat for perhaps the twentieth time. And, "How de doo, sir?" he greeted the stranger.

"Good morning, sir," said Burnham pleasantly.

"Say, Sam," Roland blundered with his usual adroitness, "this gentleman——"

Burnham's hand fell heavily on his forearm and he checked as if throttled.

"What's that, Roland?" Sam turned curiously to them.

"Oh, nothin'; I was—er—just going to say that this gentleman's my friend from Noo York, Mr. Burnham. I was showin' him round the town, and we just happened to look in."

"The friend you were going to write to about my burner?" inquired Sam. "Well, I'm right glad to meet you, sir."

It was here that Roland got a look from Mr. Burnham that withered him completely. His further contributions to the conversation were somewhat spasmodic and ineffectual.

"Why, no, Mr. Graham," Burnham interposed deftly. "Mr. Barnette must 've been talking of some one else he knew in New York. I——"

"Didn't know he knew more'n one there," Sam observed mildly.

Burnham's glance jumped warily to Sam's face, but withdrew reassured, having detected therein nothing but the old man's kindly and simple nature. "At all events," he continued, "I don't remember hearing anything about the matter (what did you call it? A burner, eh?) from Mr. Barnette."

"I s'pose Roland forgot," Sam allowed. "He's so busy courtin' our pretty girls, Mr. Burnham——"

"Yes, that was it," Roland put in hastily, seeing his chance to mend matters. "I did intend to write you about it, Mr. Burnham, but it's kind of slipped my mind. We've had a lot of important business over to the bank recently."

"By the way, Roland, did you just come from the bank? Is Mr. Lockwood back yet?"

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

The big people in the market have or control the best proportion of the floating supply of securities at the present time, and in the process of securing positions of advantage they both buy and sell according to the vagaries of the hour. This is why quotation at times do not mean anything in particular.

Railroad operating men say they hope the long and short haul question will be settled by Congress for all time, no matter how the financiers may view it. They assert that it has given them more trouble than all other problems presented for solution. It will reduce revenues, but this is a minor matter.

Louis W. Hill says that State street has no faith in anything, that he has not given an order on Great Northern for the laying off of any men and that the road has only recently bought rails for 150 miles of road in Oregon. "This is the time of the year when the railroads let men go. They try to get ready for the crop. Then you have all the men you need? he was asked. "Oh, no. We could use more. State street is laying off men, not the Great Northern road."

Those banking interests which have committed themselves to an advance in the market explained this decline as a normal reaction. Good features have been emphasized so much recently that the street has taken a turn in looking at the dark side, and this dark side always means copper.

$ $ $

The Amalgamated has for years tried to repeal the law of supply and demand, but has failed. Even the Steel Trust tried to repeal the law and succeeded only in so far as rails are concerned. The only salvation of the copper market is complete liquidation of the vast surplus already accumulated before that surplus becomes so large as to cause complete collapse. The longer stubborn speculative interests refuse to sell copper at what it will bring in a free market, the greater will be the collapse.

The Interstate Commerce Commission will not take advantage of the ten months' privilege to delay action on freight rates. The railroads assert they have already received assurances that new schedules will be acted upon immediately, so that they can get the new rates for handling the bumper crops promised this year.

$ $ $

Railroads do not fear any complaints of importance on the part of shippers in the new Commerce Court. The railroads say not a trust would come into court to challenge a rate, because not one of them dares make public the exact cost of its product, as it would be compelled to do to show that the rate left no margin of profit.

$ $ $

Government figures for May show that imports have at last fallen below exports. The improvement in the international trade balance is due to the decrease of imports and not to the increase of exports, for both items have declined. A favorable feature is that the increase of exports is in non-agricultural commodities.

$ $ $

All the commission houses are looking for higher prices, but the sudden turn of the market is disconcerting, and it would not be surprising to see more of a reaction before the market resumes its advance. There has been too much talk of higher prices and not enough buying.

LOCAL STOCK TRADING QUIET

Trading on the local market was very quiet during the forenoon, with a softer tone in general list and the coppers showing an inclination to lower levels when any stock was offered.

The majority of stocks in which there was a fair amount of trading showed the greatest losses. Most of the selling was by floor traders who saw an opportunity to make a turn on the short side under the leadership of Amalgamated, which was heavily sold by arbitrage houses.

Liquidation in North Butte was on the reports that the dividend would be reduced, but should actually be passed.

There were few loans of stocks, reflecting the dull condition of the market. Amalgamated was in good demand at 2 per cent., which shows there is a big short interest developing in this issue.

HOW TO COOK EGGS—Many new ways and the best manner to do it in the old ways will be told by Mme. Tetrazzini in the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

ANIMALS ESCAPE IN CIRCUS WRECK

ALTOONA, Pa., June 16.—The Robinson circus train was wrecked early to-day on the Crescent & Clearfield Railroad near Ebsenburg. Many attaches of the circus were hurt and some of the animals escaped from their cages.

READING ONLY STRONG ISSUE

NEW YORK, June 16.—With the exception of Reading, stocks opened heavy in Wall street, to-day, with losses ranging from half to 1 point in the most active shares. Reading was about the only issue which showed strength and made an advance of half a point. Later it sold off in sympathy with the balance of the list. Smelters was the heaviest issue and lost one point on small sales. Amalgamated copper, Steel, Union Pacific and Southern Pacific all lost half a point. Trading became extremely dull at the low prices.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

TO MY BOSTON STOCK PATRONS:

It having been my intention to make the musical program a most important feature of my forthcoming stock season at the American Music Hall, commencing Monday, June twentieth, with an elaborate production of "St. Elmo," I am pleased to announce that I have secured a Choralcelo for this theatre.

"THE CHORALCELO," considered by experts to be the most remarkable musical instrument of modern times, is the discovery of two Boston Scientists, who have devoted over twenty years of their lives in bringing it to perfection. Its absolute purity of tone and extraordinary orchestral effects obtained through the means of electrically vibrated strings and yet in no way mechanical, will prove a revelation to all lovers of music. I consider myself extremely fortunate in being able to offer the first of these instruments in any theatre in America.

Furthermore, it is highly appropriate that "THE CHORALCELO" should be first installed in the American Music Hall (known as the old Music Hall), with which Bostonians have always associated the highest musical ideals.

Yours very truly,
Lindsay Morison.

The Value of Education in America

It Is Well to Be Reminded of It OFTEN

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

In London a reporter of the Chronicle, interviewing W. R. Hearst, said to him:

> "Americans have a more stimulating climate, a virgin continent, New England leadership, a constant influx of the most adventurous element from the Old World, and their system of education."

To this Mr. Hearst replied:

> "You have put last what you should have put first. Education counts for more than all the rest. Human beings are capable of being made efficient if you educate them the right way. Look at Germany. The Germans have no virgin continent. But look at what they have done. And what the Germans have done any other nation could do. Education is the most important of all things."

Mothers and fathers—sometimes discouraged about their children—should remember that, at least, every child is educated. Every child is taught to read—and to the reading human being all the world of stored-up knowledge and thought is open and free in the libraries. You cannot make human beings love books or knowledge—but our system makes them know how to READ books—a wonderful step since the days of Voltaire, for instance, who tells you that in his village—excepting himself, of course—not one man, woman or child could read. (See his "Essais sur les Moeurs.")

We are just conquering the air, and teaching our heavy BODIES to fly.

Do you realize that our public school system teaches our heavy MINDS to fly, and has long taught them; and not only teaches them, but COMPELS them to LEARN?

Far more important than Monday's flying trip to Philadelphia from New York on a marvellous air machine is the flight that can be made by the brain and thought of any public school child—a flight through the past ages, led by books of history; a flight through infinite space, on the wings of astronomy; a wide survey of all knowledge from a height.

That is the flying that COUNTS. That is the flight of mind that public schools offer to every child.

Well might W. R. Hearst, speaking for this country, tell the English newspaper to put our public education FIRST.

Here's a Chance for Parents

They Must Help to Solve the Problems of the Public Schools. There Will Be 50,000 Teachers Here Next Month—a Good Time to Begin the Work

The general public in Boston and throughout New England will have an excellent opportunity to get in closer touch with the public school situation of the country when the National Teachers' Association holds its convention in this city the first week in July.

It is highly important, too, that the public take an interest in the problems that confront the teachers in our public schools. It is safe to say that these problems will never be satisfactorily solved until the fathers and mothers of the boys and girls who go to school help do the work.

It is a common thing to-day to hear complaints against the public schools something like these:

The schools turn out boys who can't write a hand that any one can read.

They turn out boys who can't spell.

They turn out boys who can't do ordinary sums in arithmetic.

Fads have largely taken the place of the good old rule of the three R's: Reading, 'Riting and 'Rithmetic.

There may be ground for some of this complaining. But who is at fault? Certainly not the teachers. They do not arrange the studies for pupils, except to make suggestions from the curriculum that is provided for them.

The schools of the country and the studies pursued in them are run by the various school boards. And they are run too much by school boards alone, and without the assistance of the parents of the pupils who are being educated.

The father and mother who send their boy or girl to school and then dismiss the subject from their minds on the theory that they have done their duty and that the rest is up to the teacher need not be surprised if the result is comparative failure.

The boy or girl who never does any studying that is not done under the eye of the teacher will never amount to anything as a student. The sooner parents get this fact lodged in their minds the better it will be for their children.

"There's no royal path to geometry," remarked Euclid to one of his friends, and the same fact holds good to-day relative to geometry or any other study of consequence. Abraham Lincoln got most of his learning hunkering before a pitch pine fire. He dug it out with the same determination that he afterwards split rails and ran this government safely through its greatest crisis.

One of the things that's wrong with the common schools to-day is the absolute lack of aggressive study done by the pupils. There is entirely too much social diversion for the boys and girls of the high schools—too many parties, dances, minstrel shows and other gatherings that take the serious attention of pupils from their books.

Parents are to be blamed for this and in a large measure they are responsible, and not the teachers, for many boys stopping school on the pretext that they want to go to work when, as a matter of fact, they have been frittering away their time to such an extent that they can't keep up with their classes.

This is one of the very serious problems that parents themselves must solve.

Parents and teachers must work together for the results that should be obtained in our schools. They should realize the gigantic task that confronts the teachers of the country, and talk and act for the betterment of this great profession.

Make a new start by properly taking care of the teachers who come to Boston next month.

The EVENING AMERICAN guarantees to advertisers the largest circulation by far of any daily newspaper in Boston and over 200,000 more than the next highest evening paper, and over 75,000 more than all the other Boston evening newspapers combined. Circulation books open to all.

FIGHTING BOB EVANS

WRITES OF

A KNOCKOUT BLOW FOR THE NAVY

By REAR ADMIRAL ROBLEY D. EVANS, Retired.

THE announcement from Washington that the present Congress will do nothing for the large number of midshipmen who annually graduate from the Naval Academy at Annapolis has been received by the entire naval service with a feeling of deep regret and disappointment. We all appreciate fully the vast importance of mending political fences and the time necessarily devoted to that work, and we likewise feel that more time than is now given daily to work would be a hardship on our Representatives, but, having stood many night watches in all sorts of bad weather, we should appreciate a few hours of extra work on their part to correct a serious wrong, which has existed for many years.

When the class of cadets at West Point graduates in June of each year they receive commissions as second lieutenants in the army. The class that graduates from the Naval Academy at Annapolis at the same time do not receive such commissions, but are continued as midshipmen for two years, when they are subjected to another stiff examination before reaching the grade of ensign, which corresponds with that of second lieutenant in the army.

That this discrimination against the Naval Academy graduate is unjust and injurious to the best interest of the service has been declared by every Board of Visitors to the Naval Academy in the past ten or twelve years. Practically every officer of sea experience in the navy has joined these boards in recommending that the rank of ensigns be given by commission to those graduating at Annapolis each year, and yet Congress can not find the time for the simple legislation to accomplish it.

Considering only the efficiency of the naval service and leaving out entirely that of personal rights, it must be evident to any thinking man that to hold these young graduates in the grade of midshipmen for two years after they leave Annapolis is an injustice which should be corrected. After four years of a course which for hard study is not excelled by any university in the world, they are compelled to give the time to their books which should be devoted to learning the practical part of their profession, the most important part of which—the handling of enlised men—they can not possibly learn at Annapolis. Crammed to the muzzle with theory from their academic course, they must still give two years more to further cramming before they can hope for a commission in the lowest rank of their profession.

And this is not the worst feature of the case. When they have reported for service afloat, they invariably, after six months or less, perform the duties of ensigns or lieutenants, but receive only the pay of midshipmen. They struggle along, ninety per cent. of them in debt, unless they have something besides their pay, giving time to their books which should be given to demonstrating their aptitude for the naval service and fitting themelves to command men.

The shameful treatment of these young gentlemen is well known to all those who have taken the trouble to look into the matter, including the men, Members of Congress, who have secured their appointments. And yet Congress cannot find the time to pass a simple law directing that they be commissioned ensigns upon graduation. The power that prevents the enactment of such a law is well known in the naval service, but we have not the votes to control this power. Is it not time that the people of the country took a hand in the game?

Any Kind o' Weather

By HARRY B. METCALF

ANY kind o' weather
Fills the bill for me;
Glad I'm livin', whether
Rain or shine it be.

What's the use complainin'?—
Everybody knows
When it's right-down rainin'
Redder is the rose.

Think the birds are sobbin'
'Cause the sun is gone?
Ask your friend, the robin,
Bathin' on the lawn.

See him shake his feathers—
Happy? Yes, sirree!
An' any kind o' weather's
Good enough for me!

Little Bobbie

He Writes About a Poet Friend of Pa's

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THIS is a funny world, sed Pa, wen he caim hoam to dinner the other nite. I met a feller yesterday that was a poet. He had ten cents, & wanted me to lend him fifteen to maik it a quarter. I lent it to him, sed Pa, & then I asked him why it was that a man with branes ever lost a bet or had to borrow munny. I doant understand it myself, sed the poet to Pa. Certainly my poetry is good. Lissen, Pa toald Ma, & I will tell you what the poet recited to me:

Sitting Bull & Setting Hen
Met one day at half past ten.
Lend me ten, sed Sitting Bull,
I am anxious to git full.
Setting Hen then shook her head,
That is not my lay, she sed.

Now, sed Pa to Ma, can you doap it out that a poet like this frend of mine has got to git a kick in the shins from cruel Destiny. It seems to me, Pa sed, that Providence shud support poets, wen thay can't support themselves. I doant agree with you, sed Ma, but let us go in & have our dinner.

Doant you like that poem? sed Pa. Certingly I like it, sed Ma, but I doant like it enuff to miss my lamb chops & green peas. Some day, Ma sed to Pa, you will git grown up, & then you will quit falling for evvery verse maker that cums along yure way. But I always lissen to the poems that yure lady poets rite, sed Pa, I have to. Why doant you lissen to mine?

We won't argue about it, sed Ma. Let us have our dinner first. So we all went in to dinner, & jest then the bell rang. Ma went to the door & in caim Pa's poet frend. I hoap I am not intruding, he sed to Ma, but I was jest going to speek to yure husband about that fifteen cents he so kindly leaned me. Oh, sed Pa, thare is no hurry about that. I hoap not, sed Pa's frend, beekaus I was jest going to ask for thirty-five cents moar. That will maik it a even half dollar, or, as we Western fellers say, four bits.

Pa got kind of red in the face, but he gaiv the poet the 35 cents & then Pa asked him to dinner. Ma dident want the poet to stay beekaus he had on one of them long, flowing ties that gits in the supe, he was a Boheemian, but he stayed jest the saim. He had luvly ways until he beegan to eat. Wen he was eating his supe it seemed like the Niagara Falls, lissening from the Canadian side.

Supe is vary nurrishing, the poet sed to Ma. I have always found it so, sed Ma, but then I always eet all of mine. You overlook lots of yures, Ma sed, unless yure spoon happens to be bent.

Supe is not only nurrishing, sed the poet, thare is a lot of romance about supe. I recall distinckly, the poet sed, a poem that I onst rote about Onion Supe. This is how it went:

Onion Supe, Onion supe,
Unto thee my head I droop.
Essence of Attar of Roses,
May thou wet a million noses.
Thou art captain of the group,
Onion Supe.

Well, sed Ma, you are certingly a sweet singer. Thare is sum grand quality about yure verses, Ma sed, that sends one's mind winging back to Keats. Talk yure napkin and wipe off yure chin, sed Ma.

The poet didnt stay vary long after dinner, but wen he went he was certingly full of food.

Music in the Street

By C. B. QUINCY

I USED to wake up mad as mad at the noises in the street,
The raucous yells of peddlers hawking various things to eat;
The fish man and the berry man, the whole exhausting row
From dealers in asparagus to dealers in old clo'.
'IGH—cash—clo'!
Blue fish—WEAK-fish!
STRA'—ber—ries.

But now that Boston's led the way with gentle music's aid,
And turns to bursts of melody these various cries of trade,
The morning chorus that resounds from every busy street
Beats opera and concert as a music-lover's treat.
"Gefulte fish and blue fish,
All of them are new fish,"
So is told the story in a voice to make you rave;
"Buy a good banan'
From a trusty man,"
Sings in lovely tenor some Caruso of the pave.

Perhaps in time the B. & N., the subway and the L
Will change to verse and music the guard's bejumbled yell;
Instead of "umpty-umpth street," "umpth square" or "avenue"
We may hear the stations called, soft as a dove may coo—
"Next stop is Scollay Square,
In two minutes we'll be there"—
How the passengers are listening as the silver notes are rolled
"Oh, kindly mind your step;
Take the side door if you're hep"—
Thus the songbirds of old Boston in the coming days of gold.
